TAG DAY BRINGS TOTAL OF $750

Sum Is Short of Total Set for Playgrounds.

WORKERS ARE THANKFUL

Supervised Places for Children Assured.

The amount of $750 was realized Saturday from the sale of buttons to aid the playground fund.

Such was the announcement made Saturday night, after the last report had been turned in.

All day workers, in relays, sold the buttons on the streets of the city, to provide the fund which will give children supervised playgrounds this coming summer.

From early morning until 8:30 at night they kept at their places. Children who frequent the playgrounds sold the tags.

Philanthropic - inclined women and girls of Lima donated their services as chaperones for the little people.

"It is a little below what we expected," Mrs. V. E. Bayly, chairman of the tag day arrangements, said at the close of the money survey.

"But we are pleased and thank everyone who in any way contributed to its success. It proves, more than anything else, that when interests of the child are at stake people are willing to part with their money in order to give the child a square deal. And that is what the boys and girls of Lima are going to receive at the playgrounds the coming summer," Mrs. Bayly stated.

These supervised places of play are for every child in the city. All have equal rights thereto.

The playgrounds at Fairport, Lincoln, McCullough Lake Park and Whittier-bldg. will soon be opened and new equipment added where necessary.

It is the object of the committee to open up playgrounds in the south part of the city and in the northwest, if sufficient funds may be had.

TED DISCARDS HIS UMBRELLA

Ted has discarded his umbrella in favor of a cat and with his pet dog Fido is enjoying the warm weather while the clouds are gathering up more rain.

A look at the barometer, hanging outside the kitchen door, has convinced Ted that it will be safe for him to venture forth without a raincoat or over-shoes.

Fair Sunday and Monday with moderate temperature, it is said. That sounds mighty good and is not a bit more than we deserve, Ted believes.

Some folks are very cautious. Ted has found. They carry an umbrella all the time. When the sun shines they use it as a sunshade and its original purpose.

"I won't need anything like that Sunday and Monday," Ted asserted.

PLAYGROUND OPEN ON JUNE 12

Horace Mann School Location Soon Ready For Use

E. U. DIENER IN CHARGE

Plans for Summer Season Announced by Director.

Horace Mann school playground, N. Jameson-av, which has been in operation for many years by the board of education, will open June 12 and remain in operation six days a week until school begins in the fall.

E. U. Diener, 812 N. Charles-st, teacher at Central High school, who had charge last year, has been engaged again this year.

Most of the director's time will be taken up with younger folks, but he plans to care for adults and any persons who may come, to the full extent of the playground centers' accommodations.

Five days a week, morning and afternoon, will be given to organized baseball. Three classes, A, B and C will be organized. Diener may be reached at telephone Lake 6941, for classification of teams and schedule of games. Diamonds will be open every day from 4:30 p. m. until dark, but games must be scheduled in advance in this class, also.

There are six tennis courts on the grounds. These will be open to the public from early morning until dark. Younger folks and persons not employed are urged to use these courts before 5 p. m. Courts will be open after that hour until dark to persons employed or who seek tennis as a recreation from their labor.

Every Thursday will be reserved for track meets, for persons of all ages. Little folks will be entertained with games of various kinds. A giant stride, a slide, ocean wave, teeter-totters, sand piles and other apparatus is open to all the children.

"It is the hope of the board of education to make it a center more and more worth while every year," Diener said. "If people like clean, wholesome sports and games in the open air, they should plan to spend leisure hours at the college grounds," he said.

FROBASE LANDS BIG CONTRACT

Lima Man to Start $80,000 Work on Ft. Wayne Plant.

Contract for the sewers, excavation and ground work for the first unit of the International Harvester company's mammoth $5,000,000 truck plant at Fort Wayne, Indiana, has been awarded to F. A. Frobase, Lima contractor, low bidder.

Announcement of the award was made Saturday. The portion of the work let to the Lima firm will amount to $80,000, it is announced.

The contract includes construction of storm and sanitary sewers, grading, excavation and road building. Ground will be broken within two weeks.

Two years ago the International Harvester Co. located its new truck plant at Fort Wayne, purchasing 140 acres of long near the city. Business depression halted plans for the erection of a plant, which will eventually employ from 12,000 to 15,000 men.

Recently decision was reached to proceed with plans. The main contract for the factory buildings has been awarded to Philadelphia contractors.

More than one unit may be constructed during the coming summer, according to information received by Frobase. The Lima firm will move two Erie shovels and a trench digger to Fort Wayne to commence operations.

A large percentage of the labor required will be recruited in Lima.

PROHIBITION ATTACK IS PLANNED. "FLYING SQUAD" SPEAKER WARNS IN TALK

Organization of friends of prohibition to counteract the work of those who would destroy the amendment was urged by James H. Wooten, county member of the "Flying Squadron," addressing an audience at the Market Street Presbyterian church Saturday night.

Movements are under way in 45 states with unlimited amounts of money available, the speaker said, to stage a fight for the nullification of the prohibition laws. Wooten demands that the amendment be given a fair trial.

Dr. Norma Brown, who spoke Saturday night, will be one of the speakers at the Sunday meetings. The afternoon meeting will be at 3 p. m. and the evening session at 7:30 p. m.

Dr. Oliver C. Stewart will be the principal speaker, both afternoon and evening. The series of meetings will close with a mass meeting Sunday night.

MORE GAPS FILLED IN RANKS OF JOB SEEKERS

Eugene T. Lippincott, prosecuting attorney, filed for nomination for a second term, on the Republican ticket, at the board of elections Saturday.

An added starter in the prosecutor race was entered from the Democratic side Saturday in the person of Captain Calvin Selfridge, world war veteran.

He will oppose Clarence F. Klinger for the Democratic nomination. Klinger filed some days ago. Harry O'Connor, Democratic nominee two years ago, is expected to file before the time limit is up, June 8.

Two gaps in the Democratic lineup were closed Saturday by the filing of Julius Callahan, 504 N. West-st, for county recorder, and John T. Coiner, clerk of the court, who is seeking a second whirl at his job.

Vacation Time Drawing Near; It's Joy Time

Everyone has his own idea as to the best way to spend a vacation. That's a mighty good thing because if everybody had the same idea at the same time there would be a terrible jam somewhere or other.

To some people a vacation trip means a day at an amusement park where one may stuff himself with peanuts and popcorn and take all kinds of thrilling rides which make the heart jump around like a buck and wing dancer. These vacations could be taken on Saturday; that gives one day in which to recuperate.

Then, too, we have the family which always goes to the Adirondack mountains, the Michigan lakes or tours around on a "See America Thirst" trip to Canada and back. This is a case where it is the man and not the woman who pays. Just note the pleasant, contented expression on Dad's face.

Some of our best American families charter a truck and, gathering up all the kids in the neighborhood, start out for a picnic party. The day may be hot and the riding rough, but that is never noticed by anyone. There is a lot of satisfaction to be obtained from a picnic dinner.

One of the most interesting vacations can be spent at the bathing beach, providing of course, that you are able to pick the right beach. If you are lucky and locate where some of the movie bathing beauties are cavorting, you are doubly lucky. As said before, it's a good thing that everybody does not have the same idea regarding the best kind of a vacation.

ROBBED, DAZED BY BLOW ON HEAD

Detroit Man Slugged by Companions, Who Evade Arrest

Slugged and robbed of $10, his sole worldly possession except the clothes he wore, Robert Smith, 17, Detroit, staggered into police headquarters Saturday afternoon, in a half fainting condition. Two companions, whom he was unable to name, clubbed him, he said.

The trio came from Detroit, where Smith said he had been working. Taking advantage of a vacation, he left his mother several days ago and set out for Alexandria, their old home. He met the other two soon after and together they rode the bumpers here.

They became aware that he had money when he bought them food in Toledo, he said. He kept the $10 concealed for use in event he could not ride freights.

The attack took place on the O. E. traction line a short distance from the B. & O. railroad, he says. The stunned by the blow he was able to walk.

Police searched the B. & O. yards for the pair, but were unsuccessful.

VALENTINO CASE CALLED TEST

May Decide Scores of Other California Marriages

"HUNDREDS ARE BIGAMISTS"

Wedded Second Time Without Docketing Final Decree

BY JACK JUNGMEYER
LOS ANGELES, (Special).—Scores of dubious Los Angeles marriages are virtually on trial in connection with the bigamy charge against Rudolph Valentino, set for a preliminary hearing June 1.

This information comes directly from the district attorney's office on the eve of action against the screen idol of a million American women.

Valentino said to include many socially and professionally prominent Californians have been reported for investigation—unions paralleling Valentino's marriage to Winifred Hudnut at Mexicali, Mexico, May 12, before he was legally freed from Jean Acker.

The status of these marriages will depend largely on the outcome of the screen star's case, recognized as a constitutional test.

"If our position on the bigamy charge is sustained, as I am confident it will be," declares District Attorney Thomas L. Woolwine, "other prosecutions undoubtedly will follow."

CALLS IT TEST
"I regard this as a clean-cut test whether California can protect itself from easy evasion of statutes by couples, one or both of whom have been given interlocutory decrees, who step across the Mexican line for the ceremony and return to this state to live together."

The only other case Woolwine admits he is definitely investigating is the marriage last October of Frank Mayo, screen actor, and Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of the famous pianist.

This marriage took place at Tia Juana, Mexico, a few days after Mayo's preliminary divorce decree from Joyce Mayo.

"We probably shall take no action in this case, however, until after the Valentino hearings," the district attorney says.

"Our investigators have gathered ample evidence to sustain the Valentino complaint upon the section of the penal code which requires proof only that couple have lived together in California after having been married outside the state before the lapse of a year's interlocutory period."

"The statute was meant to cover just such cases."
Evidence in Valentino's case was gathered by Detective Edgar C. King of the prosecutor's staff who followed the Valentino-Hudnut romance trail across the Mexican border and back to the Palm Springs, (Cal.) "honeymoon cottage."

Of the other couples Woolwine may prosecute, only a few are said to have contracted their marriages in Mexico. The other cases involve other technical questions.

"HUNDREDS BIGAMISTS"
"Hundreds of Los Angeles people are legally bigamists," says City

Councilman R. S. Sparks, former chief of the marriage bureau here, "because they have married a second time without the required formality of docketing the final decree of divorce."

But the Valentino case, officials say, has done considerable to check growing carelessness about legal formalities incidental to divorce and re-marriage.

It also has quashed the likelihood of Mexican border towns becoming Gretna Greens for impatient lovers unwilling to endure the year's wait required by California's divorce laws.

ROAD CONDITIONS ARE IMPROVED

Report of Auto Association Indicates Better Highways

Marked betterment of Ohio road conditions over those of a month ago are shown by the weekly report of the Ohio States Automobile association.

"With present weather continuing," the report says, "many detours are appearing on Ohio roads. The main highways are found serviceable and with good weather dirt roads quickly will regain normal condition, after heavy rains last week."

Trunk lines thruout the state are rounding into better condition, especially in the south and east portions.

Good improvement is noted on the 3-C route, with the exception of a three mile detour at Monroeville and two short stretches between Newark and Columbus. A small detour near West Jefferson is in good condition.

The Lincoln and Harding Highways show good improvement over the conditions of a month ago. From Pittsburgh west to Ashland the road is practically all paved with brick or concrete. Thence via Olivesburg to Mansfield, rougher going is encountered, including six miles of old pike. Road from Galion to Bucyrus good, balance to the state line alternating good and fair.

Practically all of the stretch on the Harding Highway west of Galion is under contract for paving. Little or no work is being done on the Lincoln Highway.

The Dixie Highway from Detroit to Cincinnati is good, with exception of worn pike in Allen, Auglaize and Champaign-cos. Two detours are necessary from Lima to Bluffton. Also from Botkins north to Lima. North of Bluffton, there is paving all the way to Detroit.

ELOPERS JAILED
NEWPORT, Ky. — In separate cells of the local jail, Forrest Butts, 22, and Miss Rosina McNamee, 17, both of Newark, Ohio, were held Saturday until the parents of the girl took charge of them. The couple eloped Friday night. Newport police apprehended them at the court house when they appeared for a license. The trip from Newark was made in Butts' automobile.

HEM LINES
The hem line is leading a much more regular life than it did during the winter. However, draperies have a way of hanging off at one side, and sometimes they reach the floor.

For Good Potatoes, Old or New, for Seed or Table—Dorsey's.

IMMIGRANT LAWS ARE ATTACKED

Absurdities Exist, Speaker Tells Lima Clubwomen

URGES SAME RULES FOR ALL

Last Open Meeting of Season of Federation

"I do not believe that we should have a different brand of education for immigrants who come to us than we have for our own people," E. C. Vermillion, state director of Americanization work, said before the final open meeting of the season of the City Federation of Women's clubs in the Crystal room at the Argonne Hotel.

"If the immigrants committee would spend a little more time seeing to it that the government puts its own house in order for the handling of the details of the immigration and naturalization process, it would remove much of the discouragement on the part of the immigrant, on account of the many needless delays that come," he said.

Vermillion added that the clubwomen of Lima can assist very materially by interesting themselves in a bill providing for the education of immigrants thru the Department of Labor.

ABSURDITIES IN LAWS
The speaker told of some of his personal observation. He stated that immigration laws are very plentiful in this country; in fact, more so than in other countries. He pointed out many absurdities he claims exist.

Speaking of compulsory citizenship Vermillion said it is not desirable, but when rightly carried out by community work, Americanization becomes a joyful thing. The work which is being undertaken by the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., and other organizations is very good but not as effective as work along community lines and that in connection with public schools, he believes.

Preceding the talk a musical program was given. "America" was sung by the assembly. Mrs. Willard M. Price then led in prayer. Mrs. Joe Davison gave a group of four folk songs. Mrs. P. J. Hobart accompanying. Mrs. Minor Keller sang the Italian Flower Song, accompanied by Mrs. Hobart at the piano, and Mrs. Gayle C. Dunifon, violin. Mrs. Davison gave another group of songs.

Mrs. Luah M. Butler then gave an interesting talk in connection with the recent Fine Arts Exhibition held in this city. She stated that several years ago the General Federation had urged each state to look after and encourage their poets, painters and musicians. SHIVELL LAUDED

Speaking of the Ohio poet, Paul Shively, of Dayton, Mrs. Butler stated that he had been fitted to recognize the work of a master by his training as an official art guide at the World's Fair in Chicago, where his father was the official lithographer. His acquaintance with artists and his studies along art lines resulted in the camaraderie of a group of artists in Dayton. The Fine Arts exhibition in Lima was something new in the federation annals, resulting in securing for the citizens of Lima a picture by Robert Whitmore, which in a few years, will increase in value, Mrs. Butler believes.

Mrs. Beecher Moke, the federation president, announced that Lima will have a representative from the industrial work, fortunate enough to be one of the 100 girls from over the U. S. privileged to attend the summer school at Bryn Mawr College. It is thru the efforts of the Social Industrial committee, of which Mrs. O. T. Lippincott is chairman, that the Lima representative will be afforded this opportunity she said.

SUTTER WARMS ON IMPURE FOOD

Will Keep Close Tab on Concessions at Fair

Closing feature of the summer program, inaugurated by Dr. John J. Sutter, Allen-co health commissioner, will be to make sure that every bit of foods sold at the Allen-co fair in August is free from dirt and dust and perfectly sanitary.

"Persons are often made ill after eating food which has been purchased at county fairs," Dr. Sutter said Saturday.

"We expect this year to clamp down the lid tighter than ever and all concessionists may just as well prepare to place only sanitary foods on sale there," the health commissioner said.

Dr. Sutter is securing lists of concessionaire and will correspond with each before time to open the fair, in order to give them to understand fully what is expected of them in Allen-co this year.

Dr. Sutter says he will keep a close watch on all foodstuffs and ice cream, he said.

PAISLEY PATTERNS
Paisley embroidery and Paisley silk are most fashionable right now, particularly in combination with plain materials. Very frequently the design is made heavy with small heads.

AUTO CLUB GROWS AMAZINGLY

Car Owners Stand For Good Roads and Good Laws

OPPOSED TO "PERSECUTION"

Autoists Declare Against "Unjust Taxation"

Standing four-square on a program for good roads, laws favorable to motorists and against unjust taxation, the Lima Auto club has made a wonderful growth in the past four months.

More than 700 car owners in Lima and Allen-co are members today and the number is rapidly increasing, according to Joe C. Hartline, president.

PROTECTS MOTORIST
"Every automobile owner in Lima should be a member," Hartline said, "because it is the only organization that is looking out for the interests of the motorist."

"Every law on the books favorable to car owners was placed there by concerted action from clubs such as ours. Many unfair laws have been defeated thru efforts of Ohio clubs. We're against the reckless driver, but against the petty officials who seek to persecute the good motorist."

For the first time in many years the Lima club has a representative on the Ohio Good Roads board. He is Joe T. Kaufman, one of the most active members of the club, Hartline said.

INFORMATION BUREAU
The club is maintaining headquarters at the Argonne hotel, for the benefit of members and tourists. More than 425 members and non-members were given information as to routes or hotels in the past month. Miss Minnie Holdren, touring manager is in charge.

The club has touring maps of practically every state in the union on file and is constantly receiving bulletins from other clubs, conveying information of importance to tourists.

"We will have 1,000 members in the near future," Hartline predicted.

DATE UNCERTAIN
Old Jup Pluvius having thrown his spear into the South-Central track meet three times, it is an uncertainty as to when the meet will be pulled off. One event was carried off Friday and Central took a first and third while South copped second place. If rain does no further damage, arrangements will probably be made to have the meet sometime during the former part of this week.

WHITE ROBIN IN COUNTY, FARM BUREAU INFORMED

Have you seen a white robin in your front yard this spring? Reports from the southern part of the county state that one is "at large." No definite information as to the exact location where it has been seen has been received by the farm bureau, Miss Lois Helser, secretary of the bureau, said Saturday.

White robins are very scarce and owing to the fact that they are easily seen and destroyed by cats, it is very seldom that they survive very long. H. J. Ridge, farm agent, said.

For this reason it is believed that if such a robin was hatched out this spring it has been killed by this time. Very few of the "albino" robins have been heard of by bird men, it is said.

As far as it is known there is but one albino robin in captivity. It was found in Pittsburgh by John M. Phillips, state game commissioner of Pennsylvania, and is being kept by him until it becomes full grown when he will place it in the Pittsburgh zoo, Ridge said.

PARKING SCHOOL IS PLANNED

Chief Lanker to Instruct Motorists in Placing Cars

Lima motorists will turn out en masse one of these fine spring Sundays, and be taught what to do and what not to do in parking their machines on the streets, Chief of Police T. A. Lanker said Saturday.

He addressed a letter to the Lima Auto club, asking its assistance in securing 60 or 70 autos for general demonstration purposes. No acceptance of the invitation has been announced, the chief says.

The proper parking space, the correct manner of heading toward the curb and other features of parking will be taken up.

One city block can accommodate at least 125 machines, the chief says. It should be no more or less. Once autoists have the rules down pat, much of the traffic troubles will be eliminated, it is believed.

COUNTRY BAGS
Some very gay country bag to hold the knitting and needlework with which women employ their idle hours are being shown in the shops. Some are of raffia trimmed with flowers of wool. Others are of coarse straw with pompons of wool and silk that look much like milkweed pods.

ORGANDIE BOWS
Large bows of white organdie make effective trimmings for large, drooping black hats.

EFFICIENCY PLAN IS BROADENED

Chart to Show Location of Utilities in City.

TO REDUCE FIRE HAZARDS

Map of Gas Stations, Lights, Hydrants, Catch Basins

Another map is to make its appearance within the next few days in city hall. Vaughn Miller is preparing it for presentation to C. A. Bingham, city manager.

It will show the location of every curb gasoline filling station, electric fire light, gas street light, water hydrant and catch basin in the city. By locating these curb gasoline filling stations, will be possible to determine the fire hazard and disclose if they are a detriment to traffic.

BETTER PROTECTION
Better fire protection is expected to result from the study of the water hydrants. It may be discovered that certain sections of the city have too many hydrants and other sections too few.

This will also apply to electric and gas lights and catch basins. At the present time it is not known exactly how many lights are in operation and where they are placed.

It may be found that a gas light and an electric light are placed very close to each other and that the gas light is not needed. It will be possible for the gas light to be moved to some street which has no light at the present time.

Certain streets are also getting out of the gas light classification and electric lights should be substituted, Miller believes. The chart will show where these changes should be made.

A better check on the number of lights in operation and their cost can be determined. Many lights are now being used by the city of which no adequate record is available.

A partial check up on all lights in the city streets was made some time ago by Miller and an assisting engineer, but changes made since will require a complete new survey, he says.

RECORDS COMPLETE
Records kept by John Mack, fire chief, as to the number and location of fire hydrants are very complete, but they are not in condition to be easily seen and studied, Miller said.

These records are being scanned by the engineers and when the chart is finished will be complete and easily read. Additions will be marked on the chart as they are made.

All work of the city will be available at an instant's notice when all the charts under construction are completed. Sewer and paving charts are planned. A fire chart has been completed.

FAILURE TO COOK HELD CRUELTY

Court Sets Precedent in Grounds For Divorce.

ATTORNEYS DISCUSS IT May Affect Many Cases In Alien-co Courts.

Failure to prepare a husband's meals may be considered to constitute an act of cruelty on the part of a wife in Alien-co courts follow the precedent set by the New York Supreme court.

In Gotham, Supreme Court Justice Benedict gave it as his opinion that when a woman marries nowadays she is in honor bound to prepare her husband's meals. "Cruelty," ruled the court, when the plaintiff related how his wife would not prepare his breakfast. There are a number of cases pending before Judge Fred C. Becker in Alien-co common pleas court, where similar allegations are made. Other cases have been brought before the court in the past, but there is no instance where the court has specifically ruled on the matter, or granted a separation for that cause alone. The ruling of the New York court was brought to the attention of Lima attorneys. They state that if the case was to be used as a precedent, the number of divorce litigations filed in Alien-co will be probably increased many fold. "The records are teeming with cases," declared R. R. Truhey, assistant prosecuting attorney, where a decree was granted on a wife's failure to cook, when coupled with other facts. There are also countless other cases," he said, "where a wife was willing to cook, but her inability to do so was the basis for the first quarrel, that culminated in court action."

WALTERS' PREPARE TO ASSUME MANAGEMENT OF THE CHILDREN'S HOME

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Walters, 1325 W. Elm-st., will take charge as superintendent and matron, respectively, of the Allen-co Children's Home on June 1. They will succeed Mr. and Mrs. David Higby, who for more than 20 years have been in charge of the institution. Mr. and Mrs. Walters will go to the home Monday, to become accustomed to their new duties. They will spend the several days prior to June 1 in getting the "lay of the land" there. Mr. and Mrs. Walters were named to the position of superintendent and matron of the home at a meeting of the board of trustees of the institution last week.

SOUTHERN FRUITS FLOOD MARKET

Berry Season at Height—Melons In From Florida.

The careful housekeeper, who proves herself a good buyer of seasonable fruits and vegetables, has no difficulty at this particular season in finding what she desires as the basis for canned goods and in providing the most desirable and tempting foodstuffs for the family table. The "heart of the season" for southern strawberries is here or rather it is drawing to a close, to be succeeded a little later by the home-grown product and the offerings of growers farther to the north. Hundreds and thousands of luscious berries, for the most part from Tennessee, are finding their way into Lima homes, for canning, jams and preserves. The pineapple season is at its height and dealers' reports bigger sales than ever before. Prices range lower than for several years past, which proves an added incentive for buying. Gooseberries are in market; big and tempting looking, the favorite thing for those who like something tart. Watermelons and muskmelons, as well as "roastin' ears" are in from the southland, Florida-way, and the prices are not nearly so high as one would perhaps imagine, in view of the fact that the way from south to north is long and freight rates high. Fruits and vegetables in profusion are flooding the market.

KLAN ORGANIZED COLUMBUS — Preliminary organization of a chapter of the Ku Klux Klan was perfected at a mass meeting in a public park here Saturday night. The rally was addressed by Dr. C. L. Harrod, king klieg of the Ohio organization, and William Parker, editor of the Menace.

5 KILLED IN BLAST BUENOS AIRES — Five men were killed and 23 seriously injured when a boiler in a saw mill at Belgrano, exploded into Saturday evening. The cover of the boiler, weighing several tons, was hurled thru the roof of the saw mill, falling upon a house, completely wrecking the dwelling.

ABDOMINAL OPERATION Mrs. Jane Miller, 132 1/2 E. Springfield, was subjected to an abdominal operation at City hospital, Saturday evening. It is believed that she will recover rapidly.

AMBULANCE REMOVALS SIFERD: Mrs. James A. Deemer, City hospital to 1136 Richie-av.

U. S. SENATORS VISIT LIMA

Political Comment, County, District, State

(By J. W. FISHER)

As sounding brass and tinkling cymbal are statements made during the past week by the acknowledged Progressive leaders in their respective states, Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, concerning the future of the national administration and their attitude toward President Harding.

When it is recalled that the administration leaders opposed Messrs. Beveridge and Pinchot with all their strength, but with poor results against the wrath of the people of their own party, the fulsome praise sounded by Al and Giff for the purpose of making themselves believe they'll be able to keep the solid Republican vote intact in the fall election, has resulted in laughter among the Old Guard and dismay in the ranks of the Progressives.

Realizing that they must have the united support of the G. O. P. in November if they are to win, they are now playing for the support they had determined to deny the other fellows had the Old Guard nominated their candidates at the polls. The Beveridge and Pinchot attitude smacks of cringing servility, after they won in a decisive manner their fight against the standard element of the Old Guard. Senator Harry L. New in Indiana entered the fray in a generally understood that if New was not nominated, the support of the administration gang would be withheld from Beveridge in the election. And in Pennsylvania the same sentiment prevailed, where George E. Alter was backed by the Old Guard. Alter was defeated, as was New and it isn't likely that the fellows of either have changed their minds at all since they knew full well that had the Bull Moose failed to land, they'd take their revenge in the election.

So, dear friends, since the Progressives are now in the position of endeavoring to placate the Standard-bearers, we'll see in the fall election how near they will succeed in doing it. Don't blame Al; don't blame Giff. They'll need all the votes they can get when election day comes. And they should not take seriously all the nice things they are now saying about Harding and the administration. It is done for a purpose. Harding and his friends know it. Wait for results.

How differently men in important positions sometimes see a condition of things and how far apart they are on the question of the application of a remedy. A case in point came with the presence of two United States Senators in Lima during the past week.

Hon. Atlee Pomerene of Canton and Hon. Francis B. Willis of Delaware, were speakers here on the occasion of a state convention of clubs. Both touched on the question of America's participation in European affairs. Remembering that America entered the war, spent millions and billions in money and sacrificed many thousands of lives to prevent Europe being consumed by a conflagration of militarism, Senator Pomerene believes that a league of nations is necessary for the prevention of another such state of affairs. In the absence of America's entry into the league, Senator Pomerene supported the Four Power pact, which is at least a mild link in the chain of unity that binds nations of the earth as a war antidote. Senator Willis feels that the United States can no longer live separate and alone, having no concern with her neighbors across the sea. That day is past. The Senator feels that the United States should have some voice in the shaping of affairs for the future, to prevent another war overseas.

Senator Willis presents an entirely different front from that he exhibited when America entered the war. When the Lusitania was sunk, he did not read American sentiment correctly. He was then quoted as having said that Americans had no business being on the ill-fated vessel. Now that the war is over, reconstruction going on and efforts being made to rehabilitate the nations of Europe, he would have the United States stay away from it all. In his opinion, expressed here during the past week, America had no business in the Genoa conference. He does not favor the things which a generous victor always feels.

He is against the proposed German loan. Says the people of that country are to blame for their plight and that they should be left to paddle their own canoe, or words to that effect. The Willis position is a strange one at best. When America entered the war he wanted Germany licked quick, but since the job has been done, the spirit of magnanimity is absent from his heart.

power in Washington." Senators and Representatives have been reaching the same conclusion, that is not their legislation recently passed or now pending is held up as the best proof of Hogan's statement. Jefferson became a matchless leader because he stood for popular rule as against class rule. So did Lincoln.

On the Democratic side of the gubernatorial fence the situation continues just about where it was a week ago. Former State Auditor, Chief Executive of the commission as chief executive, while T. J. Duffy, head of the state utilities commission, has not indicated that he is feeling like quitting the race. II. Sage Valentine did that thing, his little boomlet having died before becoming anything like a lusty child.

There never was a boom for Duffy. He just wanted to ride the fold, like a lost sheep that finally finds its way to a place that looks like home, only to find that it had made a mistake. Nothing has been heard from A. P. Sandee lately and it is not believed likely that he will enter. However, one never knows just what Put may or may not do. He has until June 8 to declare himself. Sentiment in behalf of Duffy is still noticeable by its absence. Sentiment against him is heard for Donahy in these parts, but none for Duffy.

One of the things that is disturbing the leaders of both the old parties is the indifference of voters generally to things political. That there is a rapid growth of independent sentiment throughout Ohio and especially in the rural districts is so marked that county organizations are almost powerless.

Voters are all ears when there is political dope to be peddled. They listen well, read the news and, well, they are not interested. But, well, they are not. Leaders admit they have little idea of the trend of things, save that there is apparent fierce antipathy to the present state and national governments. They've been watching that man Knight, a Republican, who has been hitting his own party in the short ribs in a vicious manner.

They are convinced that when a party crew gets fighting the way the Republicans are doing in Ohio, there's something radically wrong. It may be the calm before the storm and it is only natural for the Standard crowd to feel that they'll soon be getting theirs, even as was done in Indiana and Pennsylvania.

It is pretty safe to predict that before the present week is many days old there'll be showings in the matter of "heads up" for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

That a Lima man will seek the nomination, to oppose another Limaiter, Congressman John L. Cable in the fall election, is practically a certainty, as the situation now appears. While he has not finally stated that he will harken to the wishes of representatives of his party, it is believed that Hon. J. H. Goe will soon have his hat in the ring.

The way is not altogether clear for the Lima man. Ansonia, Darke-co, has a candidate in the person of Charles M. Tilden, who has filed his declaration. Tilden has lived in Darke-co all his life, is a dictionary salesman and claims to be a second cousin of Samuel H. Tilden, Democratic candidate for President against Rutherford B. Hayes.

Whether there will be other candidates to oppose the Lima man is not altogether apparent at this time. There still remains nearly two weeks for seekers to declare themselves.

Judge Hugh E. Allen of Van Wert is in the position of making an endeavor to take the knicks out of the Fifth Congressional district and get the assembly of counties back into the Democratic fold where Timothy T. Ansherry used to keep it year after year.

When party followers chased after false gods in the next tier of counties and the leaders got themselves into a jam, Charley Thompson, Defiance G. O. P. water totter and former postmaster walked away with a commission as Congressman-elect. He succeeded in doing it a second time when the political catatony occurred in 1920 and now Judge Allen is out and after the Democratic nomination to prevent Thompson from getting away with the swag a third time.

The "Allen-for-Congress Club" in Van Wert-co is back of Hugh strong. In Lima Friday, Judge Allen stated his firm belief that the Fifth district will reverse itself this year and get back into the Democratic fold, leaving Thompson in the lurch.

The Senatorial gerrymander proposed by the Republicans not so long ago having failed, the 32nd Senatorial district, of which Allen-co is part and parcel, with Auglaize, Mercer, Van Wert, Paulding, Defiance and Williams-ros, still remains intact.

Clarence L. Shafer of Van Wert-co, Republican, elected in 1920 in the landslide that clermied the platter of Democrats the most part of the way, will most likely again seek election this year, but he may not be so successful, since the novelty of Republicanism has worn off and the bitterness of the dose is exposed to view.

He'll have opposition in the person of Earl Ferguson, also of Van Wert-co, if the Democrats nominate Ferguson. Thus far Earl is the only known candidate. He seeks to take the place formerly held by his father-in-law, T. M. Berry, of Spencer-ville. Tom was in Lima during the past week, getting things started in this section for Earl.

A really serious effort is being made to clarify the G. O. P. primary atmosphere in Ohio. The political forecast for the Republicans is "cloudy and threatening." Recognizing that Congressman Charles Landon Knight's attacks on Current Thompson as the Democratic candidate will eventually spell defeat for the party unless something can be done to stop it, some sort of effort is being made to placate the fiery Akron Representative. The upshot of the whole thing will likely be that either Governor Davis will recant and enter the race for re-nomination, or that Knight will get in.

The Akron man apparently has won his fight. He started out to "queen" Thompson and it looks like he has accomplished his purpose. The manner in which Governor Davis has been comporting himself about the political sawdust ring during the past few weeks, indicates that he has not found the sort of candidate he has been looking for and that he will eventually be "forced" to enter the fight to "vindicate" his administration and the upper law. Like Old Diogenes who traveled about in daylight with a lighted lantern, looking for an honest man, the Governor has been seeking a candidate who has the nerve to make his fight on the record of the Davis administration. So far as the G. O. P. end of the situation is concerned, the dope has been turned to bunk. The latest is to the effect that if Governor Davis becomes a candidate, Thompson would be forced to quit, to save his face. It is also bruited about that Knight would not oppose Davis and that even Rupert Beetham, the rarin' candidate from Cadiz, would likewise vamoose. You'll have to give Governor Davis credit for one thing you probably haven't heretofore believed him capable of accomplishing. He is demonstrating that he hasn't altogether lost his head on the party reefs and while the Thompson standpaters would like to help give him a drubbing in the election, the Governor has the nerve to face political decapitation. State Senator Arthur H. Day and State Secretary Harvey Smith see their candidates for Governor strengthened by the overthrow of the Old Guard in Indiana and Pennsylvania, a state of affairs they believe will manifest itself also in Ohio.

United States Senator Atlee Pomerene has lost none of his joviality, his pleasing personality and his magnetic manner. The writer was in close touch with Senator Pomerene in the summer of 1920, on the way to San Francisco and during the Democratic national convention.

In the past two years the Cantonian has grown in avoidpouts and also in the matter of love and esteem—and confidence. In the hearts and minds of the people of the state of Ohio, as well as in other states, as his ability in the United States Senate manifests itself more and more.

While a visitor in Lima during the past week, the Senator, in an interview, denounced the wiggling and wobbling policy of the National Republican administration. He predicts that the Democratic party will not only sweep to victory in Ohio next fall, but that the balance of power will be wrested from the Republicans in the Senate and House of Representatives.

Pomerene held up to view as a sample of the wiggling and wobbling of the administration, the tariff bill. Although the Republicans gained full control of the machinery in Washington more than two years ago, it was not until April 11, 1922 that the tariff and revenue legislation was reported out of the House of Representatives and now the Republicans are crying because the Democrats ask time to consider it. Joseph Fordney, speaker for the majority, said this legislation would be enacted at once when the Republicans came into power, but it hasn't been done yet. And at the rate they are now progressing, babies of today will be old men and women before they get thru.

Pomerene points out that the Republican tariff will add to the cost of living of every working man in the United States and women's apparel will cost billions more a year. "They say the Democratic party was buried in the landslide in 1920," Pomerene remarked. "I tell you that although the Republican standard bearer received a majority of more than 7,000,000 votes there are few of the so-called straying Democrats and not even many Republicans who will admit they voted the Republican ticket in 1920. The Democratic party is not dead. It has outlived all other parties in the United States and it will outlive the Republican party."

Former Attorney-General Timothy S. Hogan, one of the recognized leaders of the Democracy of the Buckeye state, has thrown a new lease into Ohio affairs. He asserts that he hopes his party will espouse the cause of the national initiative and referendum and that it will endorse the principle in its platform. While the expression is that of an individual, it is, in effect, a question that has been growing in favor with the Democratic party. Hogan has advanced the opportunity to express it. He hopes to gain sufficient encouragement to warrant placing before the state convention in August a plank of that sort for the party platform.

Mayor H. H. Hartman, of Galion, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congressman in the Eighth district, expressed a similar sentiment long before the primary elections were held in Indiana and Pennsylvania, which have morally affected the Democratic attitude and have supplied the incentive for taking up more actively the fight for a greater spread of direct popular rule.

Ten reasons offered for extending this power to the voters are set forth: Centralization of power in Washington, success of the plan in Ohio and other states, strengthening of the constitution thru moral sanction, opportunity to settle questions authoritatively, right of review of decisions as in the Newberry case, expressions upon new policies, intelligent consideration of questions at the fireside, enlargement of the slogan, "Let the People Rule," establishment of the fact that the public may trust its government and the government may trust the public's real provision "for a government of the people, for the people and by the people" and bringing the government to responsiveness to the popular will.

Hogan argues that the referendum "will arrest the onward and dangerous movement of concentration of Harry L. Conn, of Van Wert, is expected to make formal announcement the coming week of his candidacy as a Democrat for a place on the Court of Appeals bench. Harry made a wonderful race two years ago in the 16th judicial district, comprising Allen, Auglaize, Mercer, Hardin, Logan, Union, Van Wert, Marion, Crawford, Wrandot, Paulding, Putnam, Hancock, Seneca, Defiance and Henry-co's.

In Lima Thursday, Mr. Conn did not state positively that he would be a candidate, but friends close to the Van Wert-co attorney believe he will release an announcement soon.

It is also stated that there is some likelihood of Judge Phil Crow, now an incumbent on the Court of Appeals bench, becoming a candidate for another term, altho he has not made a positive announcement to that effect. Should he do so, Judge Crow will have an opponent for the nomination who came near being elected in the G. O. P. landslide of 1920.

There has been much comment affecting this or that supposed candidate for this or that particular position in Allen-co in the forthcoming primary, but there is nothing certain until the aspirant progresses to the point of presenting himself before the board of elections, with a properly signed declaration of intention and paying the required filing fee.

While a goodly number seeking various offices have filed officially for this or that position, in the declaration, there are still many outside looking in. Some interesting contests are developing, but there still remains two weeks time for the political gladiators to buckle on the armor.

Altho the lists have not been closed, many of the candidates have already begun an active campaign. The county is being cury-combed in all directions, despite the fact that the primary election is more than two months away.

Those of political faith diametrically opposite from that espoused by Congressman Simeon D. Fess are preparing to heat up the water for Dr. Sim and make it uncomfortable for him if he should win the G. O. P. nomination for United States Senator from Ohio.

They propose to dig up the text of a speech Simeon is said to have delivered in Lima about the time the League of Nations was being espoused by President Wilson, in which he is said to have expressed himself unqualifiedly for it. That was before Senator Lodge and his cohorts organized their batteries and started a bombardment of the league idea, for the purpose of betraying the country into a belief opposite from that which the league proposal really meant.

Then Simeon changed front and voted against the league proposal. His Democratic friends are also preparing to torment him with his record on the navy bill. Declaring himself against it and giving out interviews in support of his position. Dr. Fess followed the administration course at the last minute and supported the Harding plan. Besides, he may have opposition for the nomination and that will keep him busy. Heartened by the success of their co-workers in other states, Progressives in Ohio may throw a candidate into the field against Fess.

Congressman John L. Cable is getting ting home from Washington for a brief stay, just in time to find the probable initials of the man he'll have to oppose in the November election, when he comes before the people again as a candidate. As the situation now appears, he will have to meet another Allen-co man in the ballot battle.

Cable hurried home to make a short trip over the district on a speaking tour, his first visit here since last fall. Monday he will speak before the Miami County Auto club at Maumee and at Port Recovery and St. Marys on Tuesday, Decoration Day. He is also planning speaking engagements at Sidney and in several other cities.

There was an old-time rally of Democrats in Ottawa Saturday. Addresses were delivered by United States Senator Atlee Pomerene, State Chairman W. W. Durbin and Mrs. Charles S. Fyke, National committeewoman, of Cleveland.

The address followed a mass meeting of the Putnam-co Democratic committee at 10 a. m. A large number of Democrats from Lima and len-co and from other points tended, to partake of the enthusiasm of the event.

United States Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty is doing the only thing there is to be doing when one is driven into a corner and life's keeping still. His position is delicate, considering that usually loquacious and pugnacious Daugherty is generally able to "take care of himself."

Harry probably hopes that things will soon die out and that uncomfortable questions that are forgotten in a press of other things more important, at least more sorbing to the public mind.

STINNES BUYS UP NEWSPAPERS

Owms Many Plants in Germany and Austria

LINK IN COAL BUSINESS

Doesn't Care Anything About Molding Public Opinion

(BY MILTON BRONNER)

BERLIN.—(Special).—In London clubs they love to tell the story of the man who boasted he read all the newspapers so he could have all kinds and shades of opinion before making up his mind on public questions. Asked what papers he read, he replied: "On week-days I read the solid Times and the sprightly Daily Mail, and the hustling Evening News in the afternoon. On Sundays I read the breezy Despatch."

He was amazed when his friends greeted his statement with shouts of laughter. One of them enlightened him by explaining that all those papers belonged to Lord Northcliffe, and expressed his policies.

There are many who say that Hugo Stinnes, Germany's business king, is the German Northcliffe, only more so. They will tell you the time is rapidly approaching when it will be difficult to know whether one is reading an independent opinion or a Stinnes opinion.

CONTROLS NEWSPAPERS
People ordinarily well informed vari- estimate Stinnes owns 12 papers, 40 papers, even 120 papers in Germany and still others in Austria. They be- wail the growing loss of free news- paper comment in Germany.

Labor leaders tell me Germany, since 1870, has always in this regard been worse off than almost any big nation in the world.

Bismarck had his press which told the public what he wanted it to be- lieve and fought the enemies and states- men Bismarck hated or feared. With the tremendous expansion of Germany as a business nation, labor leaders made the flat assertion that coal, iron and steel interests openly or secretly secured control of many of the big in- fluential newspapers of Germany. Their object was to support political parties and leaders who would give them the kind of laws and tariffs best suited to their interests.

People who know Stinnes well tell me the ability to mold public opinion through ownership of newspapers was probably only a secondary thought with him. For Stinnes, business is al- ways business. He is a practical man. He came into the publishing game first of all because he owns coal mines. The bridges from coal mines to newspapers is made of wood.

In his coal mines Stinnes needed great quantities of wood for shoring up seams and for many other kinds of construction in the pits. To assure himself a steady, ample supply of cheap wood, he bought great forest tracts in East Prussia and Finland. Then his restless brain got busy again. He had the timber and he had the coal. Why not ship the coal to where the "miles stood and manufacture valuable wood products—cellulose, paper pulp and paper?"

So one fine day Germany learned that loads of Stinnes coal were going across Germany to East Prussia, where, in Stinnes mills, trees were converted into Stinnes paper and pulp. Later he bought a big concern in Königsberg and another in North Germany. In his own neighborhood of Westphalia there was a mill which manufactured fine note paper, so he bought that, too.

BUT THREE BERLIN PAPERS

Then it struck Stinnes it would be a grand idea to manufacture Stinnes paper into Stinnes newspapers. So in quick succession he bought three Ber- lin journals. His first investment was the "Industrie und Handelszeitung," which, as its name indicates, is a busi- ness paper. It was the best in Ger- many and so an important acquisition for a business king. His next purchase was the smaller "Deutsche Warte." His third acquisition was the most significant of all. He bought the "Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung," the paper which in the old days of the monarchy was the semi-official organ of the government. What it said rep- resented what the rulers wanted known. Its readers' are still very largely the once-upon-a-time official classes who are true to the royalist cause and hope for an ultimate restor- ation of the Hohenzollerns.

SUPPORTS PEOPLE'S PARTY

Stinnes belongs to the German Peo- ple's party. In fact, he is its chief financial backer. He fills its campaign chest when an election is fought. And the right wing of the party is largely royalist. Germans who belong to the democratic parties which believe in re- publican institutions tell you Stinnes himself at heart is a monarchist. How- ever that may be, he is too shrewd a business man to come out in the open for the king's business so long as the republican wave lasts in Germany and so long as open espousal of royalty would throw him into conflict with his workmen.

The fact is the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung certainly watches its step. It confines itself largely to giving the news. If the news is colored to suit the interests of Stinnes, it is very cleverly done.

In a time when German papers are almost as small as those of France be- cause of the high cost of things, this great Stinnes sheet gives abundant proof of the full money coffers in back of it. It is the largest paper in Berlin and it spends much money on special telegraphic service in a period when the rate of foreign exchange against Germany makes cables from outside really worth their actual weight in gold.

I have been told that Stinnes owns at least one important paper in almost every considerable city of Germany and that only recently he closed a deal for two in Leipzig. Whenever such as- sertions appear in the German press, they are immediately denied by the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. The paper persists in saying that Stinnes owns only the three I have mentioned. Stinnes' secretary earnestly told me the same thing. To which other Ger- mans reply that the ownership of the many other papers may not be in Stinnes name. But they say he con- trols them just the same. Sometimes they say a bank or a coal mining com- pany or a big mill controls the paper. And Stinnes controls the bank or the mill or the mine.

He has also become an important factor in Austrian journalism, where only recently it was reported he had purchased the Elbe paper mills. This concern not only had three paper mills but four Vienna newspapers—the Ex- trablatt, the Mittags Zeitung, the Wiener Allgemeine Zeitung and the Sonn und Montags Zeitung. The Ex- trablatt is an illustrated paper with a large circulation and the Allgemeine Zeitung is a leading Bourse organ. So in Austria as in Germany, Stinnes now controls a leading business newspaper.

When a man owns a string of news- papers, it is natural that he should think about the sources of their news. In other words, he becomes interested in the press associations that supply news by telegraph. The first in which Stinnes invested money was the well known Dammert bureau, which had three separate services: One for pa- pers which support the German Peo- ple's party; one for the papers which support the Democratic party; and lastly a service for papers free from political leanings. This bureau has now been merged with the Telegraph Union, in which Stinnes is also said to have invested money.

KING OF INK AND PAPER

Having the wood and the coal and the paper and the newspapers, Stinnes has gone almost as far as it is possible in the newspaper business. But there are other outlets for print paper. There is, for instance, the book and pamphlet trade and also the general printing of leaflets, circulars, cata- logues, bill heads, etc. So Stinnes formed a new concern under his own name and also bought two famous and old established companies—the North German Book and Printing Co., and the powerful Buxenstein Press, which itself controls a number of subordinate concerns.

The eminence attained by Stinnes is obvious. No man in Germany is in such a strategic position to influence public opinion upon corporation laws, taxation, tariff and other matters that interest big business. If he wants to he can concentrate a weight of printed matter—newspapers, pamphlets, books, magazines—such as never be- fore has been at the disposal of one man in Germany.

It's no wonder that in newspaper circles they now call him the King of Ink and Paper.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

THE continued upward trend of business should be apparent to every man who is a student of affairs. Within a few months it is again to be a problem of executing orders, rather than piling down costs. Merchants who are keen realize from day to day the firming of their stocks under the general reduced price of manufacturing. Replacements may be at higher, rather than lower invoices.

In the basic commodities, former quotations rule supreme. Copper is nearing 15c; cotton is soaring. Crude oil is rising, the first fluctuations coming during the week in the midcontinent field on modest grades, yet premiums have prevailed there for some months. Railroad stocks are steadily selling higher, because earnings are showing stronger and car-loadings exceeding comparative periods. Passenger receipts are lower, as they still are above the pocketbook of the masses who make up bulk travel. While it may be conceded that the stock market has now reached the purely speculative stage, nevertheless it is based on better outlook and cheap money. Two essentials to any bull era.

Locally, the great army of unemployed has all but demobilized. Common labor is hard to secure; carpenters, painters, plumbers and the building crafts are at work. Estimates show more than 350 homes and business structures under way. Vacant houses have all but disappeared and inquiries for cheaper roofs are on file with rental agents. The "For Rent" column is diminishing in the daily newspapers.

Money is the sole need of Lima except, one might say, the need of keeping your nose out of the other fellow's business and watching your own.

Building and Loans are still short and will remain so until after the interest paying semi-annual period. Banks are slowly accumulating and conditions easing for commercial purposes.

Industrially the Loco is steadily adding to its payroll; the motor truck industry is picking up slowly. Lima is on the eve of a prosperity greater than came to it in 1916-19.

AND NOW, REAL ESTATE

FOR two years real estate in Lima might be said to have been inactive. In the business district, there have been fewer deals than in years. Those noted have been on the lease basis rather than in fee. And now, real estate as a term is very likely to be heard often in the vocabulary of the populace.

Residential Lima is inadequate for the new population which has already begun to drift Limeward. With renewal of industrial activity there must be increase in housing. Despite the general deflation, rents here have declined very meagerly thru lack of supply. The modern house or flat has steadily depopulated the unmodern during the past two years until at the present time, dwellings available are of the non-plumbing character, for the poorer wage earner only. And these will be rapidly filled if not exhausted within the next six weeks.

And now, real estate. You will hear it talked, you will see it bought by your neighbor. We want you and your wife to become interested in the subject. There will always be renters, as there will always be ne'er do wells. On paper, you may be able to convince yourself that renting is cheaper than buying or building. Possibly so. For the nonce. Then comes the day when things go wrong. The difference between cost of upkeep of home and lower rent, is where? With the winds of swept over time. If that surplus is in your home, you are king of the domain. The moving van does not affect you like a motored hearse. The van has no terrors for home owners. It goes unnoticed.

Mr. Mechanic, Mr. Merchant, Mr. Clerk, Mr. Laborer you are nearing good times again. Steady work is ahead. And now, it should be real estate for you. A home for Mary, and your own playground for little Bob. You can't lose and how much you can gain. A decade from now you will look back and say, The Lima News was right.

OUR CITY GOVERNMENT

LIMA has now enjoyed modern municipal government for almost five months. In many ways it has proven good government; in others, no better nor worse than former governments. The usual alarms over this and that have been sprung, including the latest, Eastern Time and Retroactive Legislation. Retroactive law is always bad law. You can with safety guard the future, but it is almost impossible to correct the past.

Mayor Brud is all the head of any midwestern city of enterprise, push and vigor could hope to claim. He is clean and he is beyond cavil, irreproachable. He is even more, for being one of the sons of the city's pioneers, Lima means more to him than to those adopted into her life by modern industry.

As a test of management, however, the new form has resulted in no wonders performed. The true test of management is the balance sheet. The war boom gave us many a $35,000 a year genius, but the last two years have sent most of them back to clerical work. Management has its trial when everything goes wrong. It is easy to pay dividends when the world sweeps along with a song; but the real guy with the guts pays them in foul weather, as well as fair.

The city balance sheet, we judge only from press reports, is about the same old sheet. Lima needs funds. There are ways to get funds, but bond issues are not funds. They are liabilities of the future. We should like to see the public informed of the exact gains in dollars and achievements at the end of the half-year. It will be an interesting study if accurately presented. A mere political juggle of figures is of no avail. You can make figures lie as easily as you can make them tell the truth. How are we stacking up over the old form of government?

MEMORIAL DAY

DECORATION DAY, or Memorial Day, is fraught this year with a deeper meaning than ever before, since the days of the civil war, after the close of which the day was set aside for annual observance.

Memorial Day in its origin was the day set on which homage was paid to the dead of the North, in the struggle of the sixties. Time has effaced the thought of sectional differences and May 30 has come to be a day on which we, as a nation, honor the memory of all our soldier dead.

With each recurring Memorial Day there seems to be developing a more deeply seated reverence in the spirit of the occasion; the younger generations exhibit a more widespread interest in the united effort to do honor to the dead and also to the survivors of the wars.

The close of the world war brought a new incentive in this direction. Thousands of the youth of the land were sacrificed on the altar of devotion and love of country. It is indeed fitting and proper that these should not be forgotten. It is altogether right that special honors should be paid to those who faced the peril of war, but fortunately live to tell the story of the scenes of carnage, the fury of shot and shell and of the victories won by deeds of valor on many fields.

Therefore, on the occasion of Memorial Day, all hearts should be in tune with the sentiment of the occasion. There should be a re-dedication of the spirit of loyalty, of love of native land and a re-consecration to the ideals of our country's institutions.

On Memorial Day, Tuesday, thousands will march to stirring music, garlands will be placed on the graves of the fallen, orators will recount their deeds, songs will be sung in their praise, and for the time the stirring days of 1861-5, of 1898 and of 1917-18 will recur in memory.

In honor of those to whom honor is due—the living and the dead—to as great an extent as possible the day should be dedicated to them. It is the least a loyal and grateful people can do. No honor that can be paid will recompense them for the sacrifices they made.

office, where all the morning sat. At noon home, to a lunch of corn cakes and bacon. Visiting long with my wife, poor wretch, who had a great cold come upon her. But now much better in spirit. And I am happy thereat.

Out and across to Lima Club, to be trimmed by Jimmie. Yet hailed and greeted by Walter Kidder, whom I knew in ye olden times when the name Hayner was a household word. With special sales on Saturday. And with him was George Sawyer, who tells me in discourse strange tales of praise about Lima people. Among names he used was Ott Plummer. Passing strange, I thought.

Jimmie in good voice and hand. To the court house for a birth certificate, yet found Dee was never born. So to Walter Richie's, the barrister, for legal affidavit proof of my child's being here against her getting a passport. And her mother took oath that Dee was duly born. So she is, and pray Uncle Sam will admit it.

Talked long with an all-American blue-blooded city employe, objecting to employment of Canadians by this municipality. And could make little out of his tale. Yet me thinks something dark in the woodpile. Down to Charlie Lynch to borrow much money. And didn't. In discourse with Allie Graham later, he spoke in pride of the house-building about the town. Especially of improvements on West Elm. Twenty-five new structures within midtown distance of one another. If Skinny Bailey made the shot.

Came an anti-saloon league grapejuice salesman. The juice to be turned into port wine by mixing it with Fleischmann's vitamins and rain water. But I never could mix a milk-shake. Let alone juggle a 5-gal. keg. So another glorious opportunity knocked, and found no one at home. On the wire, invited to Community Park, out Market-st. way. By Billy Numan. And accepted on the morrow.

Home to dinner, on a murdered sheep. In the evening walked to the moonshine to the Brice Avenue chemist's shoppe. And hot wax ached against a pain in my back. So poulticed to bed.

Common Sense Ways to Keep Well
SNUFFLES

Be sure your child doesn't develop a case of constant snuffles. Snuffles or "cold in the head" is rather common among children. It comes on of itself, or it accompanies many diseases, such as measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, mumps and the like, and then the nasal discharges are "catching."

The child may at the outset suffer from chilliness and headache, and give evidence of being out of sorts.

Then the nose "runs," a watery secretion appearing; with this the nose gets clogged up and the child snuffles, breathes with difficulty, and has to keep its mouth open to breathe at all.

The obstruction is worse when the child is lying on its back, causing much discomfort at night; in infants, indeed, attacks of suffocation may result and breast feeding be interfered with.

After a time the watery secretion increases and at the end of a day or two becomes considerable in quantity, the swelling of the mucous membranes of the nose at the same time lessening, so that the nose breathing becomes easier. The discharge, while it becomes less in quantity, becomes also thicker, and finally dries up altogether after a week or two.

The child is at first languid and unfit for any exertion, but brightens up somewhat after the first two or three days.

There is a great tendency for the catarrh to pass downward to the bronchial tubes and the lungs; and this constitutes the chief danger of nasal catarrh in childhood.

Recurring colds must, therefore, not be treated lightly; they may lead to bronchitis or pneumonia.

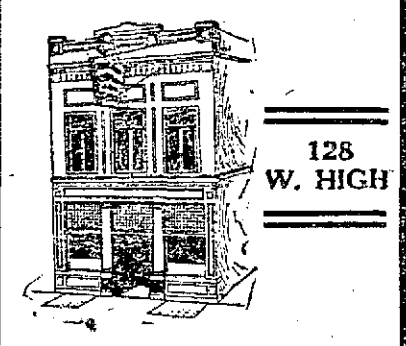

A cause be carefully sought in ill-ventilated and overheated nurseries, in stomach troubles, in cold extremities, in injudicious exposure. And the discovered cause must be removed before any treatment will avail.

Beveridge Too Says Nice Things About Harding

FOLLOWERS ARE DISMAYED

Governor Davis is Enigma—Political Chat

THE LIMA NEWS BUREAU

COLUMBUS, May 27

(Special)—There's a suggestion of "say it low, brother," in the telephonic messages that are being sent to Progressive candidates in the Republican primary by their fellows, who are not seekers, whenever support of President Warren G. Harding is mentioned. In a general way, (but only in a general way, mind

you) that for the present it being acknowledged that Mr. Harding is President of the United States and an ex-officio leader of his party in a nominal sense and as such he must be given the perfunctory expression of loyalty due to the chief. To be regular in form, either silence or a weak and water statement of acquiescence in the national administration is considered good. Let one depart from this policy, he must at once lose caste with the insurgents. It is better still, a sort of hypocritical piety, such as has been effected by

Congressman Charles Landon Knight of

Gorham, for the president is also good.

Gov. knows," says he, "I want to be known as the President." Having done so much the next thing is to find as many possible points of criticism of the Harding administration from the seams of Newberry to the progress tariff bill and to exploit them for all they are worth. These are the secrets of 1922 party regularity

—insurgency, a think more intricate than a Freudian dream complex.

It is the progressive elements of the party which is now probably majority—or perhaps it would be better to say the dissatisfied element

—laugh when it read how the President will support any candidate bearing the Republican label, when he is a Ku Klux Klanner, a

Polakish, a reactionary, a Progressive, or anything. But it made them element a bit angry when some who had been thought Progressive went once bit far in protestations of loyalty to the Harding administration since his utterance upon this subject. Indeed, Purdy, that enchanter of Pennsylvania voters, sank somewhat in the estimation of those who skated loudest when he whipped the machine. They complained that he had been nominated because they expected him to be opposed to Harding and because he was pictured to the public mind as the very antithesis of the President. They are more inclined to think that Knight had the right formula. Be for the President—not too strong—and lambast

the boss he represents. Could anything be niftier?

Whatever is the final outcome of the efforts of Hon. George H. Clark, of Canton, it can be said that he

that was outraged by the violation of the state referendum and long for an opportunity to express itself directly on the large national questions before it. In making the point that a direct referendum would prevent much flaccid as the treatment of the soldier bonus question at Washington which Mr. Hogan says has "disgraced" the nation, he makes a strong one. Many postcards, referendum and petition referenda and telephone referenda have been taken to disclose the sentiments of the people of this country. Naturally, the inquiry arises as to the reason why there should not be a real referendum. If that system had been in vogue in 1919, the country would now be a member of the League of Nations, because a vote could have been had where the tricks of the "immortal 31" who told the country would be put into the league by President Harding, could not be played. Ohio likes the referendum and has already said so several times.

Around these parts Hon. John Henry Goeke, of Lima, has always been credited with being a good lawyer and a smart man in politics from the time when as a mere youngster he presided over the Democratic state convention and first gained state fame. But his admirers now do not know whether it is due to his luck or his skill that he is assailed by a Republican in his district, the Fourth, as a weak candidate for the Democratic nomination because he acted "as chairman of a war chest committee, headed two Red Cross drives and conducted two Liberty Loan campaigns to raise money for the government in prosecution of the war." The assault seems to have been made in good faith upon the old plea that the war is a "failure" the same plea, incidentally, in a different age on which the old Democratic party went sick. It was anything else, then the fellows who got it up are surely master strategists. It is likely that any real attack made on Mr. Goeke because of his fine patriotic record would be resented in the Fourth district as much as anywhere in the state, because the district did turn out some keen fighting men.

Interest in several of the Congressional nominations is going to be quite keen before the nomination day rolls around. Up in the Eighth district there is a movement to eliminate the Cole family from Ohio politics since Ralph D. took the count and is no more. They are after R. Clint now. Senator James R. Hopley of Bucyrus is out in one end of district and Mayor Harry Radebaugh of Findlay in the other. The location of Cole and Radebaugh together ought to make the going tough for the last remaining Cole in Ohio politics. If Mayor H. H. Hartmann of Gallon should become the Jacksonian candidate, there would be a transfer of interest in the south. In Columbus, there are many dopesters who think that County Auditor H. Sage Valentine will come thru with the permission when it's all over, for they generally agree that Congressman John C. Speaks has made little impression. He was there with his own opinions about the war department and his discharge from the army back in 1918, but he has not been able to make the others agree with him. There was a movement on behalf of Major W. S. Pealer for the Democratic nomination, but he dodged it. His friends say he is the man to head the legislative committee in a legal way when it gets to work to dig up the scandals in the highway department, purchasing department, canal department and oh, so many other places.

All this fuss down in Washington over the activities of Hon. Harry M. Daugherty, now Attorney General, in the House case, has been the incident surrounding the Moore case and that terrible physical condition of the fact and saucy promoter will not be touched upon by this friend of man because the information is coming out in Washington and there is no desire to run ahead of the story. But there is an interest on the war profiteer end of the story. It comes thru the decided lack of enthusiasm for a Congressional investigation as displayed by Congressman Simeon D. Fess, of Yellow Springs, now a candidate for United States Senator. Mr. Fess at one time was quite deft in intimating that the horrible Democrats who blundered into a victorious conduct of the World war and stumbled into prosperity in the "eight years of mismanagement" lined their pockets with national funds, but he has no such insinuations handy at this time. The answer probably exists but it has not yet been brought out. It is one more point in the Progressive catalog of why Mr. Fess will not do in their estimation and why they yearn for a real Progressive to take his measure in the primary, hoping and praying that one will come forward. There is a minor view on this too, which is that the nomination on the Republican ticket against Albee Pomerene is not considered worth enough to try for. Take your choice!

There's still a chance that former Prosecuting Attorney John F. Maher of Greenville will get into the race for the Democratic nomination for Attorney General, giving the "party of the common people" so much good timber to pick from that it would be hard to see how a mistake could be made. Maher would like to have the office, but he has so much practice as a lawyer that he does not feel like losing time going after it. If he comes as a candidate an organization will be made for him in nearly all parts of the state. He will make the fifth in the race. The others are Forrest F. Smith, of Columbus, representing the younger element; Floyd C. Williams, of Cincinnati, backed by Judson Harmon and Hugh L. Nichols; Garrett Claypool, of Chillicothe, and Stephen M. Young, of Cleveland. Smith was first in and is a hustling youngster, while the others have been letting no grass grow under their feet.

It's hard to understand all the desire of aspirants to be on the state ticket for Lieutenant Governor, unless it is that they consulted actuaries and have divined that next year and the year following is a time when a second in command may be Governor by accident. The last one was Andrew L. Harris and a good man he was, too, although far from being a success in the job. There are a lot of big brained beef-eaters running for Governor from Vic Donahay down to Governor Davis and it is hard to understand why so many have set their heads on breaking into the position that either makes a man obscure or makes him a jack of all trades. Twice in a decade big men got moved to higher jobs out of the place but that was because of the man; not because of the office. Hugh L.

Nichols and Albee Pomerene did not need a Lieutenant Governorship and both took it because the party demanded it, and for no other reason. But this year the candidates multiply like flowers in the spring time. What's the reason?

Perhaps, and only perhaps, not that the Oregon primary has shown a striking evidence of the Ku Klux Klan activities, the Republican politicians will be less inclined to scoff at John I. Arnold, better known as "Jack." The former Lieutenant Governor has the "Guardians" or what is left of them and, as he modestly confesses, carries their vote in his vest pocket. It would not be surprising therefore if he received more support than has heretofore appeared possible. Arnold has not given over his determination to be in the primary, come what may. If he finds sentiment turning strongly against the administration he is perfectly free to capitalize it and do it for a fair. His name is better known now than it was in the years in which he achieved fame if not fortune. With Congressman Simeon D. Fess carrying the administration colors, Jack has felt there was a call for a man to take the opposite tack and at least provide a receptacle for the disaffected. The Oregon primary discloses that the Kluxers can be a factor in the primaries here. Thus far the political leaders have been inclined to overlook them as not being worth noticing, but they'll begin to woo them now. There is little likelihood of the bunch mixing it up in the Democratic primaries because organizations of this sort usually believe they can do more in the Grand Old Party and "Jack" fits them to a nicety.

It's not the new-fashioned radio but the old-fashioned telephone that is a real factor in politics. The radio is hardly yet developed to the point where it is a medium for reaching people and it takes a bad third as against the newspaper which will always be first and the telephone which can be used to reach a large number of people. Nor is the motion picture theater a good medium because the patrons go to be amused and not to be guided in their thoughts on public matters. They do not care to see the likeness of John McSwalt and the manager of Colonel Carmel A. Thompson are now reported to be rather sorry for their bargain in getting his face flashed on the screen. When the pictures get to be general there's a kick-back because the story goes around that they cost like sixty and that is just the impression that the "millionaire carpet bagger from Minnesota" did not wish to have conveyed to his dearly-beloved and prospective constituents. A report comes from Wisconsin that Senator Robert M. La Follette shows them how to use the telephone keeping in touch with sentiment in every corner of the state and having his information first hand. So farewell radio, pictures and all and back to the old ways. Politics must keep behind science. It can't get ahead.

If Rose Moriarity were still a little girl in school, which she is not, the neighbors would say she had been spanked and kept in after hours. Figuratively speaking, the poor woman has had a bad time of it. With her, bygones are bygones, mighty quickly and she probably does not understand that masculine trait of "keeping cases" as the saying is and waiting—until a man's trial. It probably had slipped her mind that one short year ago she made a big fuss over the special low rates on premiums given to three industrial concerns that had a specially good experience and that she complained they were unjustly dealt with and threatened to leave the workmen's compensation fund. The whole proposition was explained, but Miss Moriarity was satisfied with no explanations. Time drifted on. Big firms did become self-insurers and the extra money that they had been granting to the state insurance fund began to be missed. Likewise the employers still in the fund began to howl because they were not getting the credits that accident prevention work entitled them to receive. So something had to be done and Miss Moriarity called in the very man whose work as actuary she had so roundly condemned. Emile E. Watson came, told the commission it was substantially right before and made new suggestions to take it back over the road once traveled. And Miss Moriarity enthusiastically accepted the proposition, all of which, which the other commissioners laugh in their sleeves, removed all removal plans that may have been in Governor Davis's mind and made Miss Moriarity's almost forgotten plan of the year before look like a plugged nickel. She might have forgotten it, but not the other commissioners. Nuno!

Leave it to the lawyers to think up reasons why murderers should not be executed. There's a man now in the "hot house" as they call the death row down in the big prison who was identified by a witness at the time of his trial as "the powder can." The reason is solemnly advanced why this negro should be kept out of the electric chair. If he had hitched another nickname to him doubtless the counselors would not be content with a mere reversal of the conviction but might have asked a pension. Recently, a conviction was asked to be set aside on the ground that the trial judge used a hard tone of voice in charging the jury. The lawyers said it had to be heard to be appreciated. There was nothing legally wrong with the charge, but the intonation and pronunciation were very much criticised. Nevertheless, the prisoner went to his doom, probably still thinking that he might have been spared if the court could be made to understand how sternly the trial judge spoke. If this thing keeps up, talking machines to make records of the charges to get the intonation will be as essential a part of the material for a review as the legal "high points" now.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN THE SKIN

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of harmless and delightful lemon bleach. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day, then shortly note the beauty and whiteness of your skin. Famous stage beauties use this lemon lotion to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach because it doesn't irritate.—Adv.

REDS WIN TWO, NEAR FOURTH PLACE; INDIANS COP

Cubs Taste Defeat

CINCINNATI—The Reds Saturday moved into what practically amounts to a tie with Brooklyn for fourth place by taking both ends of a double header from the Cubs before a crowd of 9,990 paid customers.

Cincinnati took a big lead in the second game, but a three base-bum by Pinelli on Barber's rap with the bases full in the sixth enabled the Cubs to pull alongside, and chase the Reds to the showers. Jack Kelleher, club third sacker, sprained his left ankle in a collision with Pinelli in the first game. Scores:

HOW KIND!

ST. LOUIS—Baseball Commissioner Landis today has a straw hat he did not have before coming to St. Louis Thursday to participate in a baseball campaign. It became known today that when Commissioner Landis was preparing to throw the first ball in the game between the Cardinals and the Pirates he doffed a heavy hat and placed Rogers Hornsby's baseball cap on his head.

"Gee, you wear a hat for this time of the year," remarked Hornsby. "Why not wear a straw?"

"Well, I would if some one would give me one," Commissioner Landis replied, laughingly.

"I've got a couple coming for hitting home runs," Hornsby said. "I'll give you one."

The player made good with his offer and the commissioner appeared later wearing a straw hat.

Tigers Are Tamed

DETROIT—Clark went in for Cutshaw in the Tiger-Indian game Saturday and muffed Speaker's fly in the fourth, causing the Bengals to lose heart when a total of four runs were marked up at the end of the inning, giving Cleveland a 5-3 victory.

Uble was relieved by Coteleskie in the sixth inning after he showed signs of wobbling. Covey held them safe the remainder of the distance.

Would Be World's Greatest Woman Athlete

ELIZABETH'S MUSTS AND CANT'S

I must work hard.
I can't eat candy or ice cream or cake.
I must keep in training.
I can't sit up late.
That's the prescription for breaking athletic records.

By BOB DORMAN

LEONIA, N. J.—To be the world's greatest all-around woman athlete—that's my ambition.

It's a pretty hefty ambition for a girl of 16, but Elizabeth Stine, who's in high school here, harbors it. And she's made a fair start toward its fulfillment. She's to be on the American team at the international track and field meet for women, fixed for next August at Pershing stadium in Paris, if the French capital can raise money for the gathering, or elsewhere if the necessary funds aren't forthcoming from the Parisians. In the trials for this team Stine finished first in the hop, skip and jump, with a distance of 33 feet 10 1/4 inches, a record; first in the running broad jump, with 18 feet, and second in the running high jump and 100 yard dash.

WELLS KAYOED

MAC'S DOUBLE KILLING

BOSTON—Connie Mack's Athletics showed the Red Sox why they are a first division club Saturday, when they took both games of a double header, 3 to 2 and 2 to 1. Unusual pitching marked both contests. Hasty pitched the first victory and Naylor the second for the Athletics. In the first game Bing Miller made his 11th home run. The scores:

PHILADELPHIA	AB	R	H	PO	A	E
Philadelphia 1	000 010 000 01-3
Boston 2	010 010 000 00-2

Two Trapshooting Events On Program This Week

Lima trapshooters will exhibit their prowess at two meets this week—the Central Ohio Trapshooting league shoot at Kenton on Thursday and the Lima Gun club event here Friday. The local winners will stack up against some of the best marksmen in Ohio at Kenton, but the way they have been pelted the pigeons they should have no trouble in annexing a big slice of the pie.

The boys also anticipate the 36th annual tournament of the Ohio Trapshooting league at the Meadowbrook Gun club, Akron, June 7-8. Cash prizes and trophies will aggregate $2,000, and the program is open to both amateurs and professionals. The annual meeting of the league will be a feature of the evening of the first day. The program:

Wednesday June 7

July 4th Is Big Pie

STIFF competition is being offered by the Lima Gym club and Earl Smith, as matchmaker for the L. O. O. Moose, in seeking the Fourth of July date for a fight card.

The boxing commission will meet Monday to decide which organization will get the date. A considerable delegation of Moose, headed by R. R. Trubey, dictator, may be present to present arguments why the lodge should be granted the permit.

According to Charley Maxwell, matchmaker for the Gym club, the commission made him a promise, unofficially, that he would set the Fourth because the club's application for a date sometime in June could not be granted, owing to the fact that Memorial Hall has been let by the county commissioners for the entire month to other parties. The organization applied for either June 13 or 16, Maxwell said.

If the Gym club gets the date Earl Smith's fighters will headline the card, Maxwell said, following the policy of alternating with other stables in the city. Letters are out to Willie Ames, Akron; Patry Dugan, Toledo, featherweights, and other fighters. The outcome of the Gross-Ames battle in Barberron June 6 may provide the opportunity for re-matching the boys for the main Independence Day go. Red Young may be matched with a good welter. Smith declared Gross and Young will head the card if the Moose get the date.

PLAN TO READJUST BALL SCHEDULE

A plan to readjust this somewhat messed-up schedule of the Lima business men's baseball league will be carried out this week, Bill Herman, pilot of the Lions, announced. No games are on the program this week and it is proposed to play off the Kiwanis-Lions game, which is on the schedule for June 8, on Thursday, thus vacating one afternoon and presenting an opportunity for one of two postponed matches to be worked in.

The Kiwanis-Rotary game of May 18 and the Lions-Rotary contest of May 26 had to be cancelled because of wet grounds.

With its ace pitcher, Jerry Madigan, in the box, the Elks club of the business men's league was given a drubbing by the Knights of Columbus team Saturday at Murphy's park, score 12-3. George Slusser was on the mound for the Knights and only a few safeties were registered off his delivery.

Cubs Taste Defeat

CINCINNATI—The Reds Saturday moved into what practically amounts to a tie with Brooklyn for fourth place by taking both ends of a double header from the Cubs before a crowd of 9,990 paid customers, 5 to 1 and 7 to 6. Both games were full of heavy hitting, the Reds specializing in triples and the Cubs in doubles.

Cincinnati took a big lead in the second game, but a three base-bunt by Pinelli on Barber's rap with the bases full in the sixth enabled the Cubs to pull alongside, and chase the Reds to a 7-6 victory.

Pinelli, Cincinnati's undefeated hurler, took the first game, losing to the Cubs, 5 to 1. He pitched a complete game, allowing 10 hits and 5 runs.

HOW KIND!

ST. LOUIS—Baseball Commissioner Landis today has a straw hat he did not have before coming to St. Louis Thursday to participate in a baseball campaign. It became known today that when Commissioner Landis was preparing to throw the first ball in the game between the Cardinals and the Pirates he doffed a heavy hat and placed Rogers Hornsby's baseball cap on his head.

"Gee, you wear a hot hat for this time of the year," remarked Hornsby. "Why not wear a straw?"

"Well, I would if some one would give me one," Commissioner Landis replied, laughing.

"I've got a couple coming for hitting home runs," Hornsby said. "I'll give you one."

The player made good with his offer, as the commissioner appeared later wearing a straw hat.

Pinelli pitched a complete game, allowing 10 hits and 5 runs. He was hit by a batter in the sixth inning.

Tigers Are Tamed

DETROIT—Clark went in for Cutshaw in the Tiger-Indian game Saturday and muffed Speaker's fly in the fourth, causing the Bengals to lose heart when a total of four runs were marked up at the end of the inning, giving Cleveland a 5-3 victory.

Uhl was relieved by Coveleskie in the sixth inning after he showed signs of wobbling. Coveleskie held them safe the remainder of the distance.

Would Be World's Greatest Woman Athlete

ELIZABETH'S MUSTS AND CANTS

I must work hard.
I can't eat candy or ice cream or cake.
I must keep in training.
I can't sit up late.
That's the prescription for breaking athletic records.

By BOB DORMAN
LEONIA, N. J.—To be the world's greatest all-around woman athlete—that's my ambition.

It's a pretty hefty ambition for a girl of 16, but Elizabeth Stine, who's in high school here, harbors it. And she's made a fair start toward its fulfillment. She's to be on the American team at the international track and field meet for women, fixed for next August at Pershing stadium in Paris, if the French capital can raise money for the gathering, or elsewhere if the necessary funds aren't forthcoming from the Parisians.

In the trials for this team Miss Stine finished first in the hop, skip and jump, with a distance of 35 feet 10 1/4 inches, a record; first in the running broad jump, with 16 feet, and second in the running high jump and 100 yard dash.

MACK'S DOUBLE KILLING.
BOSTON—Connie Mack's Athletics showed the Red Sox why they are a first division club Saturday, when they took both games of a double header, 3 to 2 and 2 to 1. Unusual pitching marked both contests. ## Two Trapshooting Events On Program This Week

Lima trapshooters will exhibit their prowess at two meets this week—the Central Ohio Trapshooting league shoot at Kenton on Thursday and the Lima Gun club event here Friday. The local ninerods will stack up against some of the best marksmen in Ohio at Kenton, but the way they have been pelling the pigeons they should have no trouble in annexing a big slice of the pie.

The boys also anticipate the 36th annual tournament of the Ohio Trapshooting league at the Meadowbrook Gun club, Akron, June 7-9. Cash prizes and trophies will aggregate $2,000, and the program is open to both amateurs and professionals. The annual meeting of the league will be a feature of the evening of the first day. ## BREAM FIGHTS IN CINCY

Babe Bream is in the prime of condition for his bout Monday night with Henry Colletta in an eight-round preliminary at Cincinnati. He left today after more than a day of rest following his hard grind with Red McDonald of Toledo Friday night.

The Babe took a fight from Colletta in Hamilton several months ago, punishing him severely, though outwitted by a considerable margin. Colletta, however, appears to be a trained fighter and Bream isn't expecting a walk-away.

It was an unexpected surprise McDonald who walked to his corner after the first round of the battle Friday night. The upstate Irishman of the russet tatch had no idea that Bream would waste in and meet him at his own game—slugging.

Despite his short reach, however, against McDonald's long guts, he hit the visitor with such gusto that the latter soon erased the amused smile from his features. It became a serious matter for him to escape a karp.

The Lima boy hopes to show as much against Colletta, who is fully as tough as McDonald.

Bream's fighting partner, Bantamweight Don Baxter, will probably show in a main go mill at Cincinnati soon. Negotiations for a fight between him and Sammy Sandow are in progress. Baxter is insured a long run in Cincinnati, Dayton and other cities in southern Ohio thru his remarkable showing against Hughie Richards last week in the Gem City, chasing Blockie's little brother all over the ring and giving him a boxing lesson.

LIMA AUTOMOBILE DEALERS OFFERS A WIDE CHOICE OF CARS FOR SELECTION

WILL MAKE 5,400 FORDS DAILY

President Hopes to Meet Demand for 189,750 Cars for June.

Ford dealers thruout the United States have asked for a total of 189,750 cars, trucks and tractors to meet June requirements, as a result of which the factory schedule for June has been boosted to 140,000, an increase of 10,000 over the present month, according to an official statement from the company. This will necessitate the building of 5,400 motors daily. The motors will be shipped in carload lots to the assembly branches thruout the United States. With May production showing a substantial increase over the previous record month for Ford, an announcement of the big increase in June is of interest, in that it forecasts a continuation of the present conditions in the motor car industry. Tuesday, May 16, the Ford plant turned out 4,878 cars, an increase of 15 over May 15, the previous record day. The Ford factory has hit the six million mark in the manufacture of cars. One of the sixth million will appear in Lima. Despite increased production, Ford officials say, the demand is growing so rapidly there is little possibility of production meeting requirements. Most children taken to school at state expense are transported in motor vehicles. For ball bearings, the best lubricant is a fluid oil no thicker than the heavier machine oils.

POOR POLICY TO CARRY NEW TIRES FOR SPARES

It is a mistake to carry new tires as spares. The epidemic of tire stealing that prevails thruout the country has demonstrated the avidity of tire thieves for tires that have never been used and can be disposed of as new. A new tire naturally brings a much higher price than one that shows wear. Motorists whose new spares have been stolen with unfailing regularity should remember that they have been offering tempting bait to the thieves. The sensible thing to do, says the United States Tire Company, is to use a new tire for a few hundred miles before using it as a spare. Soak squeaky springs in gasoline before oiling them.

New York, with over 760,000 cars, has 7 1/2 per cent of the country's automobiles. Nearly 125,000 American tourists crossed into Canada last year at Niagara. When a front tire wears rapidly it is because the wheels are out of alignment. In Germany a 16-horsepower automobile costs 100,000 marks or more.

BATTERY CASE FROM GUMMITE

Latest Achievement Being Displayed by Beckman

A battery case made from Gummite, the latest achievement in the automobile battery industry, has been placed on exhibition at the local Exide Service Station Beckman Electric.

A general invitation to car owners to visit the Service Station and inspect the new Exide battery case has been issued by Mr. Beckman, the manager.

Mr. Beckman, or one of his assistants on hand to explain the advantages of Gummite for battery cases.

Incidentally, Mr. Beckman wishes it to be plainly understood that Gummite is neither rubber, nor a rubber composition.

"Gummite," which is undoubtedly the most important development of recent years in the automobile battery field, has however, the acid-resisting qualities of rubber or rubber compositions. But a battery case to be ideal must also have strength and rigidity, be immune from heat or cold, and sudden changes of temperature, and be sturdy enough to withstand a lot of bumping and vibrations.

Gummite fulfills these conditions exactly and leaves nothing to be desired. It has also stood the test of time and service, thus removing it from the experimental stage. For many years gummite in its basic form has been used successfully for submarine battery cases in the British navy. It was also thoroughly tried out in actual service for years by the manufacturers of the Exide Battery before it was placed on the American market.

"We will gladly explain gummite to car owners who are interested even though they may not need a new battery for sometime to come. It is a very important development in the motor world and has already attracted considerable attention."

BUICK FIRST AGAIN IN YELLOWSTONE PARK

Each year since Yellowstone Park was opened to automobile travel by the U. S. government, more Buicks have made this difficult trip than any other car excepting Ford.

The figures for 1921, just announced, show 1871 Buicks passed thru the Park during that season, 412 more than any other make.

The Yellowstone Park tour calls for every ounce of car performance—miles away from service for days at a time—the car must never fail. And that is why each year an increasing number of Park tourists depend on Buick.

Buick cars measure up to Buick reputation.

3 Outstanding Buick Features

The power and dependability of the Buick valve-in-head motor, the positive yet easy action of the Buick multiple disc clutch and the Buick torque tube drive rear axle with its certainty of performance—are three of the principal reasons why more Buick cars are in use today than any other make save one.

We'll be pleased to have you ask for a demonstration.

MOTOR CAR SALES INDICATE AN UNPRECEDENTED COUNTRY WIDE DEMAND

RAY BATTERY CO.
OPENS BRANCHNew Service Station Becomes Part of National Organization

The Lima Ray Battery Service Station has been appointed to represent the Ray Battery Company, of Ypsilanti, Michigan. Ray Batteries, made famous by their "Lavier Formula Plates" are already stocked and are ready for immediate installation in practically every make of car.

This new service station becomes a part of a National organization instituted by the Ray Battery Company to render extraordinary battery service. The foundation of this policy of this organization of service stations, is a battery made especially for, and sold only for, replacement purposes, containing the manufacturing to one field and one policy. As evidence of high quality, the factory presents a two-year guarantee to each customer. This guarantee, which becomes effective the date the battery is sold, is unconditional, which means that if the battery fails to function properly at any time within two years from date of sale by the service station, a new battery is given free. There are no adjustment clauses whatever. Thus the purchaser knows he will have no repair charges for two years, less he allows his battery to freeze, damages it in an accident, or allows it to run down so that it needs recharging.

The final tie-up with unusually strong guarantee is careful selection by the factory of its representatives. Ray distributors and service stations are not authorized to sell Ray Batteries unless they can demonstrate their ability to maintain the standard of service called for by the factory. This careful selection provides for Ray Batteries, assuring every purchaser or owner of a Ray conscientious battery advice and minimum cost for service.

ARMORED CAR TO COPE WITH CRIME

The use of high powered automobiles by bandits, daily thefts of payrolls, the daring use of firearms by hold-up men, and the inability of the police to prevent crime committed by highwaymen, has forced corporation executives to seek a solution to this very menacing problem, and an answer has been found in a special type of armored car, according to Russell Baker of the Reo Baker company.

While the master-minds of the underworld were scheming new robberies, with ensuing loss of life, the heads of big corporations in the East were facing a critical situation, augmented by the impending raising of rates of protective insurance," says Mr. Baker.

"But insurance only covers the actual cash loss, lives being unprotected and no return of the vast amount of energy needed in restoring lost records.

"A logical solution of the problem has been found in the armored Speed Wagon, engineers turning their attention to this war-time device as the only hope to cope with present day conditions. Speed is essential, stability of construction without excess weight, and yet the car must offer the maximum efficiency.

"One of these armored cash carriers is seen daily in the service of the Delaware, Lackawanna Western Railroad and the body was built in accordance with the ideas of Major Francis H. Schoeffel, head of their Secret Service and Police Department.

Bankers throughout the country are investigating the merits of the model to thwart thefts of bank money in transportation and payroll holdups; affording delivery of large sums of money with speed and safety.

California, Oregon and Washington have one motor car to every nine inhabitants.

Iowa has most cars in proportion to population; one to every 5.23 persons.

STORAGE BATTERY
MORE QUIET"B" Type Much Better For Radio Than Dry Cells

The terms "hard" and "soft" used to describe certain kinds of audion tubes are not often clearly defined so that many radio operators may not know exactly what is meant when they are used. A "hard" tube is in reality a vacuum tube, that is, one from which a great portion of the air has been exhausted and the air within it is greatly rarified. These are known to the trade as amplifying tubes and require at least forty-five volts in the "B" circuit for their satisfactory operation.

"Soft" tubes are not exactly vacuum tubes, but contain some gas and operate on a circuit of 18 to 24 volts. They, in trade terms, are known as detector tubes, because they are more receptive to faint radio signals.

"But regardless of the kind or number of audion tubes in the set," says H. T. Fletcher, local representative of Willard Storage Batteries, "much depends upon the kind of 'B' battery used. A storage 'B' battery is much quieter than the common dry cell type, besides giving a more uniform delivery of current and much longer life."

TIRE PRICES NOW AT LOWEST POINT

"So far as tires are concerned, the motorist is in clover these days," was the comment of A. J. Mueller of Lincoln Highway Garage, dealer in United States tires. "There never was a time when prices were so low. In the big slump in business that prevailed thruout the country about ten years ago prices got down nearly as low as they are today but you want to remember that the tires of ten years ago were nowhere near as good as the tires of today. When you buy a standard tire at the rock-bottom prices of today you are getting about twice the value you used to get."

"It never pays to buy a tire that is not strictly high grade and it is especially poor judgment to do so today when the prices of the good ones are so low. No one knows how long these low prices are going to last, but for the moment at least car owners have the advantage of a price decline that is unprecedented."

GOOD TIRES NOW
AT LOW PRICES

"It is easy to recall a time when there was not as much pleasure being in the tire business as there is today," remarked W. S. Sney of the Colonial Auto Sales, dealer in United States tires.

"Not so many years ago it was foolish for any motorist to start out on a long journey without taking along his overalls so as to be ready to make tire repairs every few miles, and selling tires was not a satisfactory business. But today we have tires that reel off thousands of miles without any marring circumstances. The best record is 39,000 miles made by a Boston merchant on a set of Royal Corda.

"It's a pleasure to sell goods that have real quality in them. During the war and afterwards for a number of years prices of quality tires were so high that people found it difficult to buy first class goods. But today we dealers have the added pleasure of being able to give our customers the finest line of tires ever made and at the lowest prices in history."

LIMA STREET IMPROVEMENTS AND ROADS IN VICINITY RANK HIGH WITH OTHER CITIES

TWENTY MILLION OVER 700 CARS FOR ROAD WORK DAILY NOW

Lima's Bond Issues to Cover More Than Hundred Thousand

REPORT OF ASPHALT ASSN.

Ohio is Second in Sale of Bonds for Street Improving

That the road building season for 1922 is well under way, thereby greatly relieving, in a measure, the unemployment situation, and that the public interest in highway work, as evidenced by the willingness to finance it, is steadily increasing, is demonstrated in official reports for the month of April, 1922. The reports cover bond issues proposed, voted and sold in states, counties, parishes, townships, road districts and municipalities throughout the country, among which the city of Lima with a bond issue of $102,200 for street paving reported as sold, is one.

In April, 1922, a total of $20,568,766 in proposed new bond issues for streets and roads were reported. Bonds actually voted in April totaled $5,511,630 as against $16,428,612 the month before. Bonds sold during the month before April were five times those of April, $41,953,521.

North Carolina cities sold $1,370,000 worth of street improvement bonds, leading the states in that respect, while Ohio with $1,053,683, was second, and Texas with $930,000, was third.

SALE OF OAKLAND CARS GROWS

Local Distributor Tells of Nation-Wide Increase

While April has been the banner month for this year for Oakland cars, Sales Manager Searcy, of the Lima agency, it has already been outdone by the sales of May with sales then half the month over.

Sales during the month of April this year were larger than the month of September, 1920, which was the second largest month in the history of the Oakland Motor Car company.

During the first fifteen days of April sales have been sixty-six per cent greater than April with every day showing an increase in sales.

One remarkable thing about the sales is that they are coming in more evenly from all sections of the country and that the full swing of prosperity is not confined to any one section and this, of course, is the best kind of return to normalcy.

Geo. H. Hannum, president of the company, has just returned from a month's trip to the Pacific Coast, during which time he visited Oakland branches and distributors in the Central West and Pacific Coast territory. He reports business conditions improving rapidly.

MOTOR NOTES

After race the engine. Keep battery terminals clean. Tighten all bolts and nuts. Use of chains when streets are dry causes less life to the tires. Oil the springs before going on a tour. Tighten battery terminal nuts often so as to maintain contact. Squeaking rim lugs means they need tightening. If you have to cross a bump in the road, coast over it.

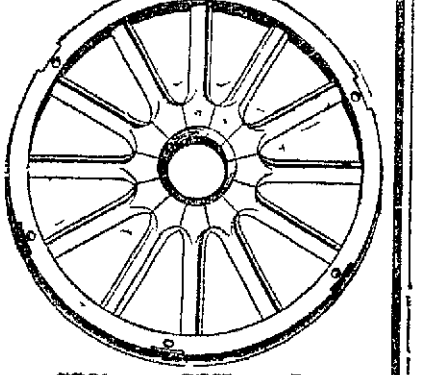

Overland Factory Again in Big Production

The Willits Overland Co. facing the biggest shortage in their history, and with thousands of orders piled up ahead, have increased their production to over 700 cars per day. Officials of the company have notified the Lima Overland Co. that production will be increased as fast as possible to meet the demand and 800 cars a day are assured by the first week in June. With the new low prices established on the Overland & Willits-Knight line, the factory has been deluged with orders and every dealer in the country is begging for cars.

The new series Overland car with its all steel body and full baked enamel finish as well as its complete equipment stands out today as the premier buy on the American market. The price is only a few dollars more than the cheapest car on the market and the Overland has many of the features only found on high grade cars such as one man top, door opening curtains, electric auto to lite starter, extra heavy fenders, selective transmission, three quarter floating rear axle, spiral differential gears, speedometer, dash light and many refinements not found on low priced cars. All Overland closed cars now furnished with cord tires at no advance in price. The local dealers have sold more cars in the past 60 days than during any similar period in their history.

DAUGHERTY AGAIN HIT BY CARAWAY

Brand of Ananias Put On Watson, Senator Says

ATTORNEY GENERAL REPLIES

Declares Morse Pardon Asked By Congressmen

(BY LAURENCE M. BENEDICT)
WASHINGTON.—(United Press.) Attorney General Daugherty Saturday night replied further to Senator Caraway's charge that Charles W. Morse's release from Atlanta penitentiary on the ground of physical illness constituted a fraud on the government.

In a long statement Daugherty said the records in the Morse case show that Morse's release was based on reports of reputable physicians and United States army surgeons showing him to be suffering from a serious illness.

Daugherty did not mention Caraway in the statement, nor refer directly to the controversy between Caraway and himself. His statement included copies of reports concerning Morse's condition, made by doctors and army surgeons, in it he also named many members of the house and senate, who, he said, appealed to the department in Morse's behalf.

ATTACK ON DAUGHERTY
Daugherty's statement followed a further attack on the attorney general in the senate by Senator Caraway who read a telegram from a personal friend in Arkansas stating that Daugherty had sent an agent into Arkansas to look Caraway up.

This telegram, signed by J. H. Anderson, said that "a man named Mathews, who claims to represent the attorney general, is making inquiries concerning you."

Mathews, the telegram said, was operating in Little Rock, Hot Springs and elsewhere in the state.

WELCOME SLEUTHS

Caraway said Daugherty was welcome to put sleuths on his trail. "If he wants to adopt that cowardly method to keep me from telling the truth about him," he asked how much of the $500,000 appropriated for Daugherty's use in catching and convicting war grafters was to be used in shadowing senators and how much in putting criminals in prison.

Caraway also criticized Daugherty for his letter to Senator Watson, Indiana, denying that he ever told Watson he had no connection with the Morse case.

"I don't know what Senator Watson will do about the placing of the brand of Ananias on his brow that way," said Caraway, "but it was clearly done by the attorney general to shield himself."

Representative Johnson, Republican, made another unsuccessful attempt to force house floor action on the Woodruff-Johnson resolution calling for an investigation into alleged laxity in war fraud prosecutions.

COUNT 'EM! IT'S LAST CALL

You May Win "Freckles" Tickets for "Penrod"

Well, have you finished counting Wesley Barry's freckles?

He certainly has a lot of them, hasn't he? You see, this picture of him (which by the way, we are printing for the last time) was taken just a few weeks ago, just at the time when freckles are blossoming forth at their best.

Just lots of youngsters, and grownups as well, have counted the spots of Wesley's face and have sent in their replies to the Freckles Editor. (Someone addressed me as the "freckled editor". Don't mind a bit, tho. That's just what I am.)

The prizes, $5 in all, will be awarded to the ones who come the nearest to answering the query: "How many freckles has Wesley Barry?" The contest closes at 6 o'clock on Monday, so all answers must be in before that time. Just address your reply to "The Freckles Editor, Care of 'The Lima News'." Use a post card if you have one handy, but anything will do. Be sure and have your name and address written out clearly and legibly.

Again we are giving the list of prizes. If you're the least bit patient and can count, you have a perfectly good chance of winning either a cash prize, or a ticket to the Sigma to see "Penrod", in which Wesley has the leading role. Do it NOW.

THE PRIZE LIST

First prize—$5.00 in cash.
Second prize—$2.00 in cash.
Third prize—$1.00 in cash.
Fourth prize—$1.00 in cash.

CHEST EMPTY AS U. S. FACES DEBT

Obligations Totalling $775,000, 000 Mature on June 15.

NOTES MAY BE ISSUED

Treasury to Solve Financing Problem This Week.

(BY JAMES T. KOLBERT)

WASHINGTON.—(United Press.)—With obligations totaling $775,000,000 maturing on June 15, the treasury department Saturday prepared plans for the greatest financing program since the war.

Announcement of the financing plans probably will be made early next week.

There is no money in the treasury now which can be used to meet the June 15 obligations.

The financing program will likely call for the issuance of at least two series of new treasury short term notes, at an interest rate probably as low as 3 1/2 per cent. There will be in addition one or more offerings of treasury certificates of indebtedness at the same rate.

TAXES DUE JUNE 15

The treasury has a cash balance in the general fund, or will have about June 15, of upward of $100,000,000, but all of this is not in usable cash. Then, too, the general fund must be conserved to meet currency payments for the operation of the government.

Tax payments are due June 15. They will bring in between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000, leaving a balance of approximately $400,000,000 to be raised by financing.

The maturities to be met from taxes and from borrowings include $383,000,000 treasury certificates of indebtedness; $270,000,000 of Victory 3 3/4 per cent notes which have been called for redemption, and $125,000,000 to pay interest due on first and second Liberty bonds.

A new series of certificates of indebtedness will be offered June 1, for $200,000,000. These certificates are to pay but 3 1/2 per cent interest.

The funds brought in will be used for Victory note redemptions which are already being made by federal reserve banks at the option of the holders.

The federal reserve board has advised the treasury that already more than $100,000,000 of the Victory notes have been offered for redemption.

SPEAKER AT BEN HUR ASSEMBLY

Dr. Walter Mansell, Columbus, a well known entertainer and chautauqua speaker, will feature an open meeting to be held by the Lincoln Court, Tribe of Ben Hur, May 31 at 8:15 p. m. in Central-bldg, North Main-st.

A general invitation has been extended to all who have read the book or seen the play to attend the meeting and to listen to the address by Mansell.

AIRMEN ON TRIP AROUND WORLD ARRIVE AT LYONS

LYONS, France.—Imperilled by fog on the second leg of his flight around the world, Major W. Blake, British airman, piloted his giant De Havilland plane to a safe landing here Saturday.

Major Blake, accompanied by two British companions, left Paris Saturday morning and after flying southward for some time encountered bad weather. He rode his machine over the fog banks, and was kept aloft over an hour longer than would have been needed for direct flight to Lyons.

The airman, who hopes to complete his world flight this year, left Croydon airfield and flew to Paris Wednesday. The next leg of his flight will be to Rome, whence he will fly to Athens, Crete and on to India. He will cross the North American continent from west to east, if all goes well sometime next fall.

No Successor to Fraunfelter—Candidates Declare.

An appointment to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Deputy Sheriff Clarence Fraunfelter may not be made until June 1, Sheriff Charles W. Baxter, stated Saturday night.

Fraunfelter, chief deputy under Baxter for the past three years, tendered his resignation Saturday, coincident with filing his declaration as a candidate for the nomination of sheriff, on the Democratic ticket.

Inability to give proper attention to his official duties and campaign for the Democratic nomination at the same time was stated by Fraunfelter as grounds for vacating the office.

With four candidates in the race officially and as many more dark horses in the field, the fight for the Democratic nomination of sheriff is warming up.

Those who have filed are Clarence J. Fraunfelter, Oscar J. Roush, Robert W. Poling and Charles Conrad. W. E. McCrate, Bath-tp, who is conducting an active campaign, but has not filed, is expected to do so the coming week.

JUNE BRIDES SOON TO HOLD STAGE CENTER

MANY AFFAIRS
FOR NUMEROUS BRIDES-TO-BE

Continuous Whirl of Festivities In Their Honor—Usual Elaborate Features Succeeded by Simplicity—Renz-Mohr Wedding Event of Thursday

(By ROSEMARY CHRISTEN)

WITH the approach of the month of June all thoughts center on the happy brides-to-be and the continuous whirl of festivities that are being given in their honor.

The weddings are remarkable for their simplicity and solemnity and the many informal affairs are being given for the brides-elect, the usual elaborateness and formality is conspicuous by its absence.

One of the most prominent and perhaps, the most elaborate of the June weddings will be that of Thursday when Miss Beatrice Renz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob F. Renz will become the bride of Robert W. Mohr, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Mohr. The wedding will be solemnized at 10 o'clock at the Zion Lutheran church, the Rev. Arthur H. Pfeiffer, pastor of the church officiating. Miss Renz' attendants will include her cousin Miss Rhea Batters as maid of honor and Misses Louise Ackerman and Helen Schenker as bridesmaids. Thomas K. Disette, of Cleveland will officiate as groomsmen. Little Freda Renz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Renz and Jean Ahn, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Ahn, of Cleveland, will be the little flower girls, while Master William Reel, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Reel will be the ring bearer. Preceding the ceremony Prof. H. B. Adams will give a program of organ numbers and Mrs. Geraldine Kah Thomas will sing.

A reception at the Elks' Home will follow the ceremony. Mr. Mohr and Miss Renz will leave for a two weeks' wedding trip thru the east and upon their return will occupy the apartments of the bride's parents until fall. Mr. and Mrs. Renz will sail June 21st, for Europe. They will visit in Switzerland and Italy, returning to this country the latter part of October.

The calendar for June will not be a mere list of dates, but also a number of other interesting engagements.

Everyday the members of the College Women's club are entertaining with their annual reception for the pleasure of the girls of the senior class of Central, South, St. Rose and St. John's high schools. The reception will be held from 2 to 5 o'clock in the Crystal Room at the Hotel Jerome.

Mrs. S. K. Mosiman, of 27 Union will give an address and Mrs. Clarence Klinger, soprano, will sing.

Thursday Miss Helen Mae Curtiss, representative dramatic reader from the Department of Expression of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music will read "The Green Goddess" at a meeting of the members of the Shakespeare Study club and their guests at the Lima club. The event is being given for the benefit of the relief fund of the Social Service bureau.

Honoring the birthday anniversary of Miss Thelma Easley, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Easley entertained the following guests at dinner last Sunday: Misses Dora Hanley, Bertha Ward, Lucile Easley, Fannie Golliff, Edna Humes, Enid Easley, Carolyn Ward; Messrs. John Humes, Fred Place, Eugene Humes, Otto Easley, Freeman Metzger, James Easley and the honor guest.

Attractively engraved invitations were issued Saturday by Mrs. Harry Maynard Crawford, Mrs. Clinton Tracy Seals and Mrs. Francis William Durbin for a five o'clock tea at the Shawnee Country club, next Saturday.

FAMILY PAPER CUTS TOIL OF LETTER WRITING

EDNA LEVINE

The family newspaper is something new in literary circles.

It is designed to take the place of the letter you are always going to write tomorrow.

This method of keeping in touch with all the branches of the family tree is employed by an aggregation of cousins, 200 strong. They call their sheet "The Mishpocha." It is issued monthly.

Mrs. Jess Cordrey was chosen president of the Kee-Mar club at the final meeting of the year Tuesday at her home on Brice-av. Other officers for the coming year are Mrs. I. C. Brentlinger, vice president; Mrs. Harry Eaton, secretary, and Mrs. Earl Armstrong, treasurer. In a contest, Mrs. Paul Stratton was successful. A dainty luncheon was served by the hostess, who was assisted throughout the afternoon by Mrs. E. L. McElroy.

Ladies' Circle of the E. R. U. E. will meet with Mrs. Frank Miller, of 1004 N. West-st., Friday afternoon.

Instead of writing letters to each other members of the family send it all the news about themselves to Edna Levine of Chicago, one of the editors.

"The family paper is a splendid medium for handling all the family gossip. It keeps the correspondence down and the family spirit up." The paper was started two years ago.

ALTRUIST SPIRIT
STILL HOLDS IN SOCIETY EVENTS

Benefit Affairs Occupy Time and Attention—Interesting Program Planned by Shakespeare Study Club for Thursday at the Lima Club

REGARDLESS of the fact that the gradually mellowing spring days are continually making it possible for more and more outdoor life and more plans for the occupancy of summer homes the altruistic note in society continues to hold sway.

Predominant among the benefit affairs will be an interesting event of Thursday when the Shakespeare Study club will present Miss Helen Mae Curtiss at an afternoon gathering at the Lima club. Miss Curtiss is an interpretive dramatic reader from the Department of Expression at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.

The event is being given for the benefit of the relief fund of the Social Service bureau.

Miss Curtiss will read "The Green Goddess" by William Archer. The play is a most interesting one and has been running at the Booth theatre in New York for the past two years. Among those portraying leading roles are George Arliss, Olive Windham, Cyril Kightley and Ivan Simpson.

Mrs. P. J. Hobart, pianist and Mrs. Gayle C. Duntton, violinist will give several musical numbers at this time.

Each member of the club has been extended the privilege of inviting 10 guests for the event, which will open at 1 p. m. promptly.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Harris, of Hazel-av, were pleasantly surprised during the past week when the members of the Palmedo Social club arranged a six o'clock dinner in their honor. Mr. and Mrs. Harris are leaving soon for an extended stay in Colorado. The table was prettily decorated with flowers and candles cast a soft glow.

Following the dinner the evening was enjoyed in dancing and cards, in which high scores were held by Frank DeWeese, Mrs. E. B. Zelts and Mr. and Mrs. Harris.

Present were Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Schrad-er, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Parrish, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Zelts, Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeWeese, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Neal, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Milner, Mr. and Mrs. Whippley and Mr. and Mrs. Harris.

WHAT PARIS SAYS YOU'LL WEAR

Fashion is turning her back on us. But that is all very well, for she has a good reason.

She wants us to see just how decorative the back of a gown may become when Poitot exercises his creative genius in that direction. This Paris frock gives you an excellent idea of the sort of thing Paris has in mind for the fall. And just see how close to the floor the Parisian frock is growing.

SUSIE SMART'S ADVICE

Dear Miss Smart: I AM a girl 18 years of age. I have known a wonderful man for several years and I am very certain that he loves me. He is always nice to me, but he never invites me to go any place with him and he scarcely ever calls on me. I cannot understand why he acts this way, because I am certain that he cares for me. Do you think it would be wrong to ask him?

DISTRESSED
YES, very wrong! I am afraid that you are deceiving yourself dreadfully when you declare that the young man cares for you. Certainly no sane and perfectly normal young man could be in love with a girl and then fail to call on her.

I am afraid that you will have to resign yourself to the fact that you, unfortunately, are a one-sided love affair and that I dislike to say it, fairly hopeless from your outlook. Just suppose that in the future you try bestowing your admiration and centering your interest in another direction. That would be the wiser plan by far.

Dear Miss Smart: I am a young married woman and I am planning to entertain a small group of friends with a formal dinner. I want to give me an idea about the different courses and what would be nice to serve. Also, if one of the guests finds at the last minute she cannot attend, is it proper for the hostess to call someone to take her place, even though it may be late?

A READER
The indispensable courses at a dinner are soup, fish, roast, salad and dessert. A very formal and ceremonious dinner, however, usually begins with a tiny bit of caviare on a small plate of toast. Next, served on a bed of crushed ice, with silver forks for that purpose, comes a course of oysters or small clams on the half shell. Succeeding the oysters comes a delicate, clear soup. Next follows the fish. During the entire dinner, olives, radishes, celery and similar relishes should be passed. After the fish the roast is the proper thing in order. It may be turkey, beef, lamb, chicken or whatever you desire. With the meat several vegetables are served. A salad follows the roast and with the salad small waters are served. Of course. The dessert follows the salad and black coffee concludes the repast. Several of the courses mentioned are not necessary and if you are planning to entertain at home it would really be ridiculous for you to attempt so much yourself. The five courses mentioned at first, are sufficient.

If one of the guests is unable to attend the dinner party and the place at the last moment has to be supplied, a very intimate friend or a neighbor should be invited to take the vacant place. In such cases it is wise to explain the circumstances and the agreement to help a hostess out at the eleventh hour constitutes a real social favor.

SOME CLOTHES FOR SCHOOL WINDUP

Even the tedium of the very last days of school can be lightened with a new frock or coat.

If one is young, tho, this especial dress is recommended. It was made of colored organdie and dotted swiss combined and was the trimmest, coolest looking dress imaginable.

In checked and plain gingham it would be equally attractive and rather more suitable to the serious business of finishing school with credit.

The coat is suitable for all-summer wear. It is of tweed or homespun unlined.

COSTUMES
Nearly every costume has its cape or coat that makes it present a different appearance on the street than in the home. Sleeveless coats, cut straight and varying in length from very long ones that reach nearly to the hem to boleros, are very fashionable for mid-summer.

LEARN A WORD A DAY
TODAY'S word is 'VELTER.' It's pronounced — wel-ter, with accent on the first syllable.

It means—to tumble about, wallow or roll; the act or motion of weltering; hence, confusion or turmoil.

It comes from—Anglo-Saxon "welta," to roll.

It's used like this—"From the welter of figures which tariff disputants quote, it is difficult for the average man to form much opinion concerning the probable results of pending changes in the law."

BY A BRIDE

OLD MAN WOOS FLAPPER

(BY A BRIDE)

At the Main street station I found George Bradshaw patrolling the causeway for auto traffic. A red-cap, near by, guarded two splendid pieces of baggage.

Certainly a man with his tastes would appreciate a millionaire father-in-law!

At first I thought I would go right up to George and tell him frankly I was there because Mr. Tearle had asked me to keep him and Bonny apart.

And when Bonny arrived I'd let her storm, if she wanted to. And George could rage. But if it was in any person's power to dissuade that flapper I ought to make the effort.

And if I couldn't, I'd wire Mr. Tearle to meet them when they stepped from the train in New York.

Either way, Bonny would be saved. So there was no particular sense in talking to G. B. before the child arrived.

I was a dull, commonplace, little figure in the big crowd, rather uncomfortable, too, without my breakfast, impatient to have it over.

George Bradshaw grew conspicuously restless as the minute for the departure of the train approached.

—And Bonny did not arrive.

—And well may he worry," said I to me. "I suppose G. B. could coax a dozen beauties, of all ages, to run off with him, but not another one with the million he wants."

The last belated traveler jumped from the running board of a taxi and rushed thru the gates which clicked sharply behind him.

—And Bonny had not come!

The crowd thinned, but G. B. was too preoccupied to notice me. Any one could see that he was mightily disappointed and nervous. Not until the train had pulled out did he hail a taxi and drive away.

When he was out of sight I hurried to a telephone booth and called up the Tearle number.

"Mademoiselle is asleep, Mrs. Madison!" a maid replied to my question.

"Are you sure, Ginette?—This is important. Will you call Miss Tearle's room, softly, and be quite sure not she is there?"

In five minutes Ginette with the information that she was sleeping soundly, I laughed as I hung up the receiver. Doubtless at that moment her dapper suitor was raging in his hotel.

"So much for a romantic irresponsible flapper!" mental comment. "But Bonny! She must have remained at her father's house."

But what made her mind? Why had she unparalleled joke? (To Be Continued)

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

SALT PORK

Some Easy Ways to Prepare It

Salted and smoked meats and fish are always acceptable in the spring and summer months. Many housekeepers in the country are wholly dependent on cured meats for use in hot weather.

Salt pork has solved the problem for more than one noonday dinner table.

CRISP SALT PORK

Cut the pork as in the preceding rule. Cover with boiling water and let stand five minutes. Drain and dip in flour. Put in a hot frying pan over a slow fire. Cook slowly to a golden brown first on one side and then the other. As the fat fries out in the spider pour it off. This makes the pork very crisp and sweet.

SALT PORK WITH CREAM GRAVY

Eight slices salt pork, flour, pepper, 2 cups rich milk, 1 dessertspoon minced parsley.

Cut the slices of pork about one-fourth of an inch thick. If very salty pour boiling water over meat. Let stand five minutes and drain. Dip in flour and sprinkle with pepper. Frying pan should be very hot. Brown quickly on one side, turn and brown on the other. Then cook more slowly until the outside is crisp. Drain on brown paper and arrange on a hot platter.

Pour all but two tablespoons of fat from frying pan. Add one and one-half tablespoons flour, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and stir until flour and fat are perfectly blended and the flour is a pale straw color. Add milk slowly, stirring constantly till the sauce is thick and smooth. Pour into a gravy boat, sprinkle with minced parsley and serve at once.

SALT PORK WITH BEANS

Two cups dried beans, 1-4 teaspoon soda, 1 medium sized onion, 1 cup diced carrots, 3-4 pound salt pork, 1-2 teaspoon mustard, 2 tablespoons molasses, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups canned tomatoes.

Wash beans carefully and let stand over night in cold water. Drain and put in kettle with soda and hot water to cover. Bring to boiling point and boil 10 minutes. Drain and rinse in cold water. Do not pour the water in which the beans were cooked in the sink.

Put the onion, peeled but unliced, in the bottom of the baking dish. Add half of the beans and half the carrots. Pour boiling water over salt pork. Scrape the rind and score in inch squares. Put pork on beans and carrots. Cover with remaining vegetables.

Add mustard, molasses and pepper to tomatoes. Pour over beans and add enough boiling water to cover the whole. Cover and bake three or four hours in a slow oven or fireless cooker. During the last hour of baking bring the pork to the top of the dish to brown. If the oven is hot when the dish is put in the beans will not lose their shape and become mushy. Reduce the heat as soon as the whole boils all over.

FIRST EARNING STILL THRILLS

NEW YORK. — Miss Katherine Ludington is newly elected treasurer of the League of Women Voters. By profession she is a portrait painter.

Miss Ludington says she still feels the thrill of receiving the first money she ever earned by her work. It was for a series of pastels of members of the families of George Wharton Pepper, now senator from Pennsylvania.

"There's a quality about your initial earning that can go with no future commission," Pepper remarked. "and in order that you may get the full flavor of it—" and with that he counted into the young artist's hand, coin after coin, in the smallest gold pieces minted, the full sum due.

"BUTTERFLY" BECOMES CORPORATION PRESIDENT OVER NIGHT!

BY MARIAN HALE

From society woman to president of a large corporation sounds like a long journey, but Mrs. Isabel L. Wharff just made an overnight trip of it.

In just that length of time she was graduated from matinees, teas and other feminine delights to the more sophisticated type of entertainment offered by directors' meetings and business conferences.

Until she assumed the management of a large advertising business and would not leave it for anything.

"The foundation upon which I have built my business is this: 'We are in business to render service, and it is by rendering service to the best of our ability that we make our success.'

"I made it a point to see to it that everyone in my employ not only gives service but courteous service. I can forgive mistakes of ignorance, or even of carelessness, but I cannot forgive discourtesy on the part of those in my employ. They break down in a few minutes what I have tried for five years to build up.

"I have found a squareness about business, and the people who are in it. I did not believe existed. I believe thoroughly in the great American public."

In the five years during which Mrs. Wharff has managed the busi-

LIMA UNDERTAKER TO SPEAK IN STATE MEET

A movement to obtain more strict laws governing the issuance of licenses for embalmers and undertakers will be launched at the forty-second annual convention of funeral directors and embalmers.

The convention will be held at Cleveland June 19 to 22 and more than 3,000 visitors are expected to be in attendance, including the visitors. George Eckert will be one of the representatives from Lima and will speak before the convention.

MRS. ISABEL L. WHARFF

In New York, with branch offices in several of the larger cities, she had had no business training.

She had never given much thought to the matter of woman's place, taking it for granted it was in the home.

So when she entered the private office that had been her husband's and took up the business that had been his she had no theories as to how a business should be run and no prejudices against any new methods.

She possessed what we call the open mind. "At first, I just sat at my desk and absorbed the atmosphere of business about me," she says. "Then I began to learn the various departments of work and I worked up a splendid enthusiasm for every detail of it."

CINEMA FEATURES IN IMPOSING ARRAY IN ROSTER FOR THE WEEK

MANAGERS SCHEDULE PROGRAMS

Exceptional Over-Holiday Offerings Arranged for Lima Movie Houses to Please Patrons

Fairbanks, Barry and a Galaxy of Scintillating Stars of Film World Included

(BY ESTHER WAGNER)

AN imposing program of photodramas is announced by the local managers for presentation today and over the holiday. Famous authors are well represented in the week's roster of cinema plays, with notable players enacting their heroes and heroines.

Dumas' great story, "The Three Musketeers," with Douglas Fairbanks in the role of D'Artagnan, arrives today in all its glory to spend an entire week at the Lyric theatre. "The Three Musketeers" is one of the most imposing stories ever filmed, and ranks as the year's most popular photoplay.

Booth Tarkington's delightful story of the average American youth, as personified by Wesley Barry in "Penrod," is appearing today and for three days at the Sigma theatre. In support of Wes appear such stars as Marjorie Daw, Johnny Harron and a number of both juvenile and adult favorites.

Douglas Fairbanks, in "The Three Musketeers," at the Lyric all this week.

of Keith vaudeville, re will go into opera.

PIERCE AND GOFF: Two dainty Misses who devote their time to a musical act that is an artistic treat. A repertoire of songs that will appeal to all tastes, popular, classical, and melodies, are given by this clever duo in a manner both sprightly and pleasing.

"Jackie," a William Fox photoplay from the novel by Countess Barcynska, starring Shirley Mason, will be the photoplay attraction. The dainty Fox star is presented in the role of a little Russia waif in England, dreaming of a brilliant career on the stage as she dances to the music of a hand organ in the streets of London. The screen version was prepared by Dorothy Yost, who has made a close study of Miss Mason's special attainments.

The Majestic Pictures

HAILED by the critics and motion picture public as one of the finest productions of the current season, George Melford's "Behold My Wife" is coming to the Majestic for two days commencing today. The story was adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the Canadian Northwest, "The Translation of a Savage."

The central characters are the aristocratic son of an English family and the simple Indian girl whom they meet in the Canadian wilderness. On business for the Hudson's Bay Company, receiving word from his fiancée back in England that she has broken with him because of his family's objection to their marriage, the youth, in a fit of rage, marries the Indian girl and sends her back to England as his wife to disgrace his blue-blooded sires. Then he proceeds to hit the toboggan in his own way. However, dramatic events work a transformation in both the young Englishman and his bride, and the ending is a happy one.

"Behold My Wife" has been filmed against a background of snow-capped mountain peaks, bleak Canadian trading posts, and luxurious English country homes. The action is interpreted by a distinguished cast including Mabel Julienne Scott, Elliott Dexter, Milton Sills, and Ann Forrest. Frank Condon adapted the story to the screen. It is a Paramount picture.

The Rialto Pictures

JAMES Oliver Curwood, who has provided such well known stories for screen presentation as "The River's End," sent Martin Johnson's thrilling photodrama, "Jungle Adventures."

The Lyric Pictures

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS' photoplay version of Alexander Dumas' blood stirring tale, "The Three Musketeers," is scheduled as the feature attraction for one week at the Lyric theatre.

In this spectacular photo-feature, Fairbanks will be viewed in a new type of characterization. In the picturesque trappings of a Seventeenth Century cavalier, he is expected to give a sensationally dramatic interpretation to the role of D'Artagnan, dashing swordsman and adventurer. In fact, in "The Three Musketeers," the virile Doug is said to outdo his splendid acting of the dual role he played in "The Mark of Zorro."

This photoplay represents one of the most pains-taking and elaborate efforts at picture making of the year, according to Mr. Umpley, manager of the Lyric. No expense whatever was spared by Fairbanks, and the production is said to have cost a million dollars.

The story is based on historical fact and is acted by the best players in filmdom. Fred Niblo is credited with the direction and Edward Knoblock prepared the lens version, while Arthur Edeson did the camera work.

In the cast are such sterling players as Marguerite DeLaMotte, Mary MacLaren, Barbara La Marr, Nigel de Bruiler, George Siegmann, Leon Dary, Eugene Pallette, Hoyd Irwin and many others.

"Experience"—Dayton

RUNNING true to form, and keeping his promise that the best that the stock field allowed would be played at the Victory Theatre, Dayton, the management of the Mabel Brownell Players has executed its biggest coup by securing the production rights to George V. Hobart's allegorical play, "Experience," and will have a brilliant production of it next week. Since Hobart first offered "Experience" in New York, the play has been a phenomenal success and, despite the fact that it has only been released for stock production within the past month, it has proven everywhere it has played to be one hundred percent.

"Experience" is a symbolical play on the order of "Everywoman." Its dramatic interest is above par. The plot deals with Youth, who goes to the city to make his fortune but who falls under the sway of Beauty, Pleasure, Wealth, and Temptation. When he finally meets Crime, Vice, and Habit, he is saved by Love and Hope in a dramatic manner. When he rejoins Love, his happiness is complete and Ambition returns to him.

The presentation of "Experience" requires a cast of about forty people. It is also necessary that ten distinctly different scenes are introduced as stage environments. Assurance is given that all this will be complied with and that the offering next week will be of such magnitude as to again mark the Mabel Brownell Players as the most prominent stock organization of America.

The Sigma Pictures

THREE splendid cinema attractions are announced by the management of the Sigma theatre, for presentation during the forthcoming week.

"Penrod," the delightful little comedy-drama by Booth Tarkington, and starring Wesley (Freckles) Barry, opens the week's list of attractions, remaining at the Sigma for three days only. "Penrod" is genuinely human. It takes each character and gives them a lifelike interpretation, breathing the very essence of youthful rascality and roguishness. Each separate episode of Penrod's eventful existence has been taken and moulded into one coherent story. It is an epic of American boyhood, a revel in humor, and there's not the shadow of doubt but that everyone, from young to old, will have a most enjoyable hour witnessing the performance.

Marshall Nollan, under whose direction "Penrod" was staged, has assembled a cast of unusual dimensions, including, besides the youthful star, such luminaries as Marjorie Daw, Tully Marshall, Johnny Harron, Sunshine Sammy, Mayne Kelso, Baby Peggy Montgomery, Bernice Radom and others.

Every humorous detail of Tarkington's story of American boyhood has been faithfully retained in the screen version of "Penrod," and the selection of Wesley Barry as the hero, Penrod Schofield, known the town over as "the most orfullest kid alyin'," was a happy one. Wesley is just the type of youngster whom Tarkington wrote about. In fact, the author himself personally selected this precocious youngster as the personification of his brain hero. The Sigma will present "Penrod" for three days only, starting today, after which a sensational Fox photodrama "A Virgin Paradise" will hold the boards. The story is a dramatic one, with many of the scenes laid in the jungle. The cast is an all-star one and the production, as a whole, is decidedly worth seeing.

The last two days of the week, Friday and Saturday, will see a presentation of "The Heart of the North," a stirring drama of the great northwest, with Roy Stewart and Louise Lovely in the leading characterizations.

SILLY SEASON FINDS BROADWAY IN AN UNUSUALLY RECEPTIVE MOOD

PISH-POSH OFFERINGS FOR STAGE

There Are Exceptions, Such as "Fanny Hawthorne," "Kempy" And Several Others

Quintet of Plays Turned Hog-wash—Will Not Remain Long, It Is Predicted

BY JOHN O'DONNELL

NEW YORK—The arrival of the silly season found Broadway in a receptive mood for anything new and diverting. Since the beginning of May, theater-goers have been treated to an unparalleled assortment of theatrical pish-posh and rot.

There are, of course, exceptions like "Kempy" and "Hindle Wakes," revived under the title "Fanny Hawthorne."

But these gems fail to counter-balance such hogwash as "Abie's Irish Rose," "Go Easy, Nabel," "The Red Geranium," "The Rotters," and "Salome"—none of which bids to be on the boards long.

The worst of these is "Salome"—a wretched revival of Oscar Wilde's tragedy, whose hope for a brief run is the impetus given it by Thelma Harvey's "Dance of the Seven Veils" on the opening night.

The dance was probably the most daring thing ever seen on Broadway. Possibly there may have been Salomes who were less than Miss Harvey. But costumes aside—and Miss Harvey's was aside—none of them ever put on a dance more sensual or uglier than that which greeted the first night audience at the Klav.

Not for Thelma would there be any of this artistic display of taking off the seven veils one by one during the dance. They were discarded after the manner of a bathrobe, tossed aside with the nonchalant gesture and subsequent result which is universally rehearsed every morning before stepping under a shower.

Her costume consisted of a belt, some beaded fringe and a Babylonian brassiere. For music there was a twin accompaniment of Hawaiian ukuleles and the swish-swish of the beaded fringe in fantastic flagellation.

After the performance, a near-riot took place among the actors. According to report, several fully refused to appear again unless the dance number were changed.

Whatever the reason, the dance the second night was one-half of one per cent stuff.

There's a cast for you! And this imposing ensemble of famous stage and screen stars will all be seen in one picture, "The Beauty Shop," which opens a limited engagement at the Quilna theatre this afternoon. Cosmopolitan has the credit for gathering them together for its latest Paramount production, which is a film version of the musical comedy success of the same name, concocted by two past masters of stagecraft, Chauncy Pollock and Renold Wolf. And there's also a chorus. Fact, it's a chorus that you will not hear, but you'll certainly get an eyeful, and after all, that's about all you get in musical comedy choruses nowadays, whether on the screen or stage.

But to revert to the cast. It's about the limit in selection for a film production. Raymond Hitchcock is easily the best known comedian on the American stage today. His career is a long list of successes, from "King Dodo" and "The Yankee Consul" to his recent affair with the Ziegfeld Follies. Jim Corbett, since he tendered his resignation as heavyweight champion of the world to one General Fitzsimmons, has been a prominent figure in vaudeville, minstrel and revue productions. Laurence Wheat and Billy Van are just as prominent in their respective lines, and the charming Fairbanks Twins recently closed their season as the principal attraction in the big musical comedy hit, "Two Little Girls in Blue," after adding Lima to their list of conquests. Then, as filmdoms contribution to this congress of stars you have Montagu Love, distinguished character actor, Diana Allen and Louise Fazenda, the world's funniest woman and late star of Mack Sennett comedies.

The Quilna program today will also contain the latest edition of the Quilna News, comical Asop Fables, "Nights of Many Shadows," a new Bruce Wilderness Tale and, as a special Prizma production, "Our Glorious Dead." The latter is the only color picture in the world depicting the beautiful and impressive ceremonies at Washington on the last Armistice Day. It is also embellished by symbolic paintings by the famous Roumanian artist, views of the Lincoln Memorial, the home of Washington at Mount Vernon and the graves of American soldiers in France. All done in Prizma color this beautiful picture is a fitting tribute to American heroes.

After the encouragement of "The Beauty Shop" the Quilna will present the new Hearst-Paramount production, "A Homespun Vamp," with charming May McAvoy in the title role. On the same bill will be found a fresh edition of the Quilna News, the Pathé Review and "The Bashful Suitor," at new Triart production based upon the famous painting by Joseph Israels.

Just a hall, with slanting cement floor, and a stage barrier of fixtures, drops or scenery.

That is the Orpheum theater today.

But the show house is passing thru a notable transition. It's changing from the old Orpheum to the New Orpheum, and inside its walls the signs of coming theatrical luster already are apparent.

The work of remodeling is under way. The old seats have been removed to make way for new, cozy and comfortable seats, and preparations for the gorgeous decorations are being made.

The general remodeling work will be done by E. W. Mummaugh, of Lima, who was awarded the contract last week. Holm and Swinehart, decorators of the New Barr Hotel,

The Girl Who Lived "A Thousand and One Nights" in One Night

Amazing Parallel of the "Arabian Nights" Bride and Resourceful Mary Conway, Who for Hours Matched a Woman's Wits Against Brute Madness---and Won by Telling Fortunes!

Arnold Thompson, the Bandit Who Listened for Hours While Miss Conway Was "Reading" His Life Line.

Police Photo-Print of the hand of the Gang Leader Arnold Thompson, Showing the Life Line Around Which Miss Conway Weaved the Romance That Saved Her.

A FRAGILE and beautiful yet daring young girl, held captive by a gang of brutal drunken thugs, matching her wits against theirs through a long night of terror to save her life and her honor—this has been the situation for classic dramas.

The barren bride in the "Arabian Nights" saved her neck from the strangler's cord by telling a new tale each night for a thousand and one nights.

Mary Conway, faced by an even more terrifying situation, lived through a thousand and one nights in one night and held her tormentors at bay by a trick of vital psychology much cleverer than that employed by the Oriental princess.

The melodrama of which Miss Conway was the heroine occurred in the palatial country home of Julien Hart, California millionaire, in which the young girl was a family guest.

The mansion is situated in the center of a large estate, among the homes of wealthy suburbanites, on the San Francisco peninsula. The household consisted of Mr. Hart, his two young children, Miss Conway, and a retinue of servants, including butler, housemaids, cook and chauffeur.

The hour was ten o'clock on a blustering spring night. The servants had gone to their quarters, the children were in bed, and the head of the house was seated alone in his library, reading.

Absorbed in the book, he paid no attention to a step behind him, thinking it was that of the servant, until a hoarse voice commanded "Hands up!"

Complying, Hart turned to face two masked men who promptly thrust their revolvers into his sides. A few moments previously the pair had sprung upon Daniel de Vries, the butler, when he had opened the basement door in response to their knock, had bound and gagged him and left him lying in the hall.

In his confession to the police, Arnold Thompson, leader of the gang, admitted later that he and his men, nine in number, had arrived on the scene shortly after dusk in automobiles, which they parked in the dense shadow of the trees.

Hart's arms were bound behind him in a twinkling. A few moments later the other seven members of the gang entered the library. "Show us through the house or we'll blow your brains out," was their demand.

The terrified owner led the way to the servants' rooms, where the cook, Sarah Gannon, first to be aroused, was dragged from her bed by the hair, bound with ropes and propped in a corner of the room.

Other servants and members of the household were made prisoners in turn. The bandits were in absolute control of the isolated mansion. Telephone wires were cut. Blinds were drawn. They had the entire night before them.

Only Mary Conway was still free. She had retired early. Mr. Hart was praying that she would sleep through it all and not be discovered.

The bandits had returned to the library, dragging the owner with them, and were demanding from him the keys to the wine cellar and the combination to the safe—threatening torture if he refused to comply. Suddenly the leader whirled and crouched, covering with his automatic the broad stairway. He had heard the faint sound of pattering bare feet.

But in an instant the pistol was lowered and his face broke into a wicked grin.

At the head of the stairs was a white vision of frail and helpless beauty—a young girl, clad only in her nightgown and a hastily donned negligee, her pale blonde hair falling in a tumbled mass over her shoulders—her eyes wide with terror. Shrinking from their eyes as much as from their pistols, the girl instinctively backed into the shadows.

"None of that!" yelled the leader, and sprang toward the staircase. "Down you come—or I'll come and bring you."

Slowly she descended, barefooted, step by step, blushing with shame and fear.

They didn't touch her up like the others of the household. What need to bind those slender wrists? Obviously, to them, she was the kind of a girl who would faint at the sight of a mouse. No danger. And she was pretty to look at.

"Sit down, Miss, and enjoy yourself," said Cliff Rollins, the "bad man" of the gang. "We were just going to try a little persuasion on the old man, but now you've come. I'm sure he'll be most reasonable."

The main objective of the bandits was the large stock of valuable wines and liquors in Mr. Hart's cellar. After obtaining from him the key to one door and battering down another, they began the laborious process of carrying up the heavy cases and baskets and loading them into their waiting autos, while two kept guard over the girl and Mr. Hart.

But when this work was finished, they decided to celebrate their haul by opening one of the cases of whiskey then and there.

As they grew more boisterous, to her intense humiliation, they made her pour out the whiskey into the glasses and wait on them like a servant. More and more heavily they drank. Glances of suspicion were exchanged, quarrelsome remarks were heard. Every man was waiting in hope that the others would "pass out" and leave the field to him.

But they didn't pass out rapidly enough. Four finally dropped over, one by one, in their chairs, but five remained to quarrel drunkenly over the girl. Rollins, the "bad man," tried to seize her in his arms, and was felled with a blow of the fist by Arnold Thompson, the leader. In an instant the room was plunged into a drunken chaos of fighting, while the girl cowered terror-stricken in a corner. Mr. Hart meantime, had been dragged into another room. Fists, chairs, then knives and clubbed pistols were used. Too well the girl knew what they were fighting for. She thought of seizing one of the knives and plunging it in her own breast.

Thompson, goaded by an ugly wound in the arm from Cliff Rollins's knife, knocked his assailant into the corner and clubbed him into submission with the butt of his gun—and it was Thompson, staggering, bleeding, but still the stronger, who finally drove the others from the room.

Slowly the leader of the thugs approached the girl—nearer and nearer. He extended his hand to seize her. But she did not wait for the hand to descend.

With a sudden cry, "Your life line!" she reached out and caught his hand, palm upward in her own.

The startled bandit jerked himself free from her light grasp and whirled around. "Your life line!" repeated the girl. "The line in the palm of your hand—I was so startled when I saw it—your whole life—your future—written there! Your hand is so marvelous—extraordinary—you must let me read your palm."

It was a desperate chance she had taken—but it was a chance based on a piece of vital psychology—a man's overwhelming interest in himself—and it worked.

When the other bandits came slinking back, partially sobered, two hours later, at three o'clock in the morning, they were amazed to see their chief seated calmly beside the girl on the sofa with one of his great, hairy hands captured in both of hers, while she was bending over it as if fascinated by what she saw there and talking with him in low, confidential tones.

At four, at five, at six in the morning, after long hours had passed that must have been eternities to the plucky girl, she was still reading his palm—still holding him enthralled.

And finally, completely sobered with the approach of dawn, dizzy with meeting his "future," Thompson bade the girl a respectful goodbye, got his gang together and departed with the loot—but without touching a hair of Miss Conway's golden head.

What she told the bandit leader during the long hours of the night—what she read in his palm—only he and she know. Perhaps it will come out in the trial, for the men were subsequently captured. Thompson now claims that he fought only to protect Miss Conway from the other bandits.

lor's friends. And it was he who, after a night of wild gaiety at the club, took her home in a taxicab, shot her while he held her in his arms, and then blew out his own brains.

Mrs. Audrey Knowles-Harrison was the Miss Yates the night before. They had visited half a dozen clubs. But he swore he left her apartment at midnight, and that another man was there and was quarreling violently with the woman who was so fiendishly slain.

A close friend of both Mrs. Knowles-Harrison and Gertrude Yates—with them well known habitués of night clubs—was Freda Kempton, the dancer. Only a few weeks after the killing of Miss Yates, Freda Kempton returned to her home in Westbourne Grove and died in agony of poisoning. At the inquest, her chum, Rose Heineberg, told a vivid story of how she said Freda "made the rounds" of the night clubs.

"Freda was very fond of a man she lived with for about ten months," said Miss Heineberg. "She left him about where Freda was staying. I met her later, after midnight at Brett's Dance Club in Charing Cross road. We stayed there for a while and then went to the New Court Club for breakfast. After breakfast Freda asked me to telephone Billy. I tried several times. This was between 3:30 and 4 o'clock in the morning.

"We then went to the 'Forty-Three Club' in Gerard Street, and found Billy. Freda called him, outside, and the three of us got into a taxicab and drove to the Chinese restaurant in Regent Street. We all went in and had some drinks. Freda took whiskey. She asked Billy for some cocaine. He, I think, went out of the room and when he returned I saw him give her a bottle, a small colored bottle, either blue or green.

"I noticed there was some powder in it. Freda then asked Billy if one could die by sniffing cocaine and the Chin said, 'No, the only way you can kill yourself is by putting cocaine in water.' Going home in the taxicab Freda was crying. She said she was going to put cocaine in water and kill herself. I said 'Freda, don't be silly. That was the last time I saw her alive.'"

The death of Freda Kempton and the sensational story of her girl chum aroused all London. This was the climax—the last straw against night clubs. Scotland Yard began a series of raids. At the Palais Royal twenty people were arrested, liquor was confiscated and the flower pots and even the drums in the orchestra were searched for drugs. A raid followed in St. John's Wood Road, where men and women were found gambling at chemist-de-fers. The woman croupier, Dorothy Wigg, was arrested.

The London press began to cry that the police were protecting the most notorious night clubs. The police then changed the closing hour from 2 A. M. to midnight and declared a policy of "no extensions." A bill was introduced to make convicted vendors of drugs liable to public flogging.

But the battle of the reformers is far from won. Against them are arrayed powerful interests. They range from those who fight openly for "a brighter London" to a sinister international syndicate said to be backing the drug traffic. Both sides have declared war to the hilt. And, while the war churns on, so does the night life of London—merrily, feverishly, tragically—behind locked doors—beneath the silent pavements of Piccadilly and the Strand.

young wife of Captain Maitland Knowles-Harrison, of the British Army. They were stationed in India. When the dry season withered the lowlands, Captain Knowles-Harrison sent his wife home to England. He was to follow in a few months, when he could get leave. But leave was delayed; Mrs. Knowles-Harrison, lonely, began to "do" the clubs.

Captain Knowles-Harrison cabled his wife that at last he was coming home. He was wildly eager to see her when he landed. But she was not at the pier. She was not at the address in Kensington, where she had written him she was living. Captain Knowles-Harrison went out into Kensington Gardens. He tramped there till twilight. When he seated himself on a bench at the end of the day and picked up a newspaper, the headlines in the first column seemed to rise up and strike him in the face: "Woman Found Dead With Head in Gas Oven." The woman's name was Mrs. Audrey Knowles-Harrison.

She had sought the apartment of one of her Bohemian friends in Soho and there taken her own life. The letter she left was a pitiful document. It told of her loneliness, her first taste of London night life; how she became a slave to "white powders and green sleeps." Rather than reveal this horror to her home-coming husband with her own lips, she had chosen a swift death by gas.

The murder of Gertrude Yates, for which Major Ronald True, the aviator, was tried and convicted, despite his protestation of innocence, was the aftermath of a "night club party." Fellow lodgers in her Kensington flat heard her return home at dawn, accompanied by a man. The maid said she let the man out of the flat a few hours later. He told her not to disturb Miss Yates, that she was asleep.

The maid knocked on her mistress's door. There was no answer. When the police battered it down, they found Miss Yates in the adjoining bathroom. The white tiles were stained with blood. The girl, in silken pajamas, lay huddled on the floor, her skull crushed and a cord cutting cruelly into the neck. She had been dead for an hour or more.

Major True admitted he had been with three weeks before her death, because she didn't want to share him with another woman. One night about three weeks ago Freda and I went to the New Court Club. A man named 'Mickey' called her away from me. She went outside and when she returned she told me that a Chinese named Brilliant Chang—or 'Billy'—wished to be introduced to her. 'Billy' was outside. We then drove to the Chinese restaurant in Regent Street.

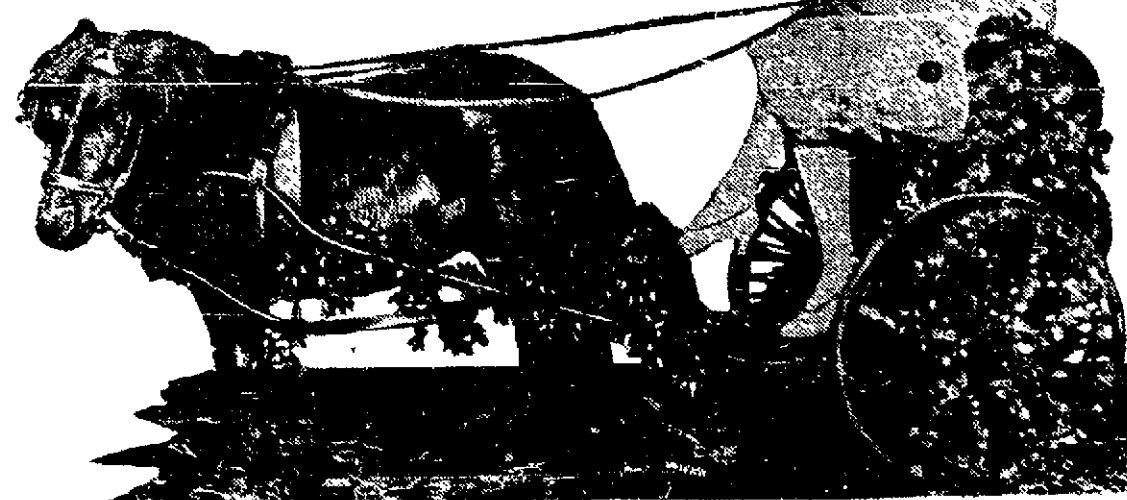

"Freda drank port wine at the restaurant," continued the witness. "Billy filled her glass more than once. He said to her, 'I want you to come outside.' Freda whispered to me to call her if she wasn't back in five minutes. When she returned, her mouth was twitching.

"I thought Freda was munching sweets, but she said, 'No, I am not eating sweets—I have been drugged.' I said, 'Don't be silly.' Freda then said, 'When I took cocaine a year ago, I always had to eat chewing gum to keep my mouth from twitching. I tried to pretend that I was eating sweets.'"

Does This Man Prove That Darwin Was Right?

The "Adam and Eve" Scene from Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah," the Play in Which He Tries to Disprove Darwin, and Substitutes His Own Theory of Creative Evolution.

Scientists Discover in Philippines a Living Man with a

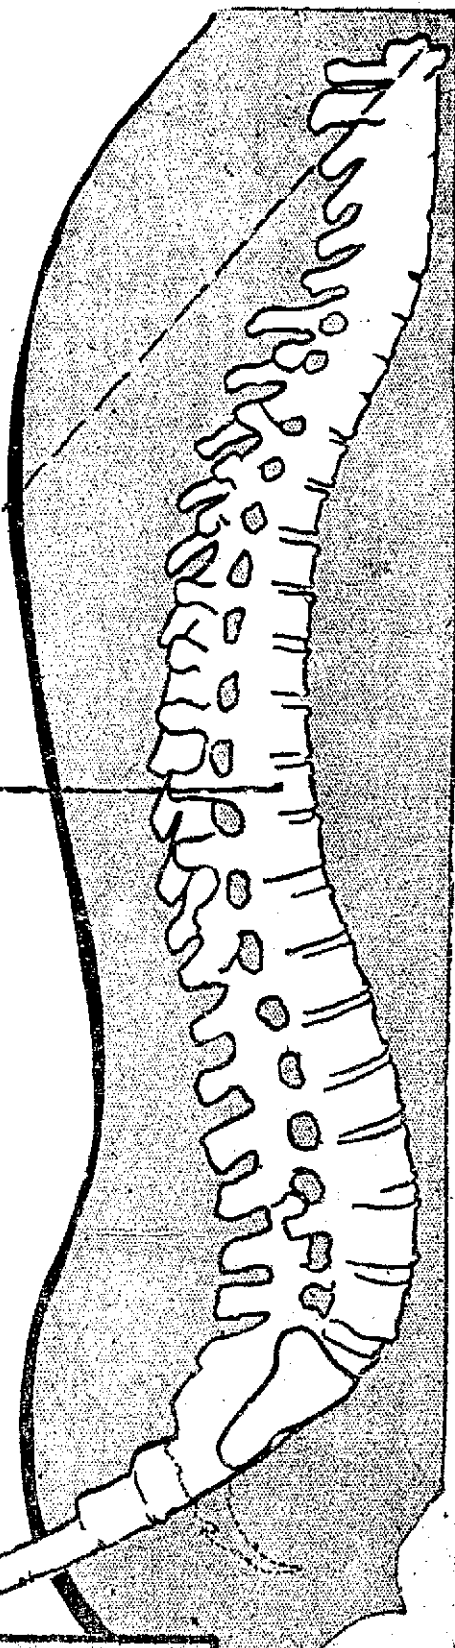

Tail, and Experts Declare It Is a "True Return to Ancestral Conditions" Proving We All Used to Have Them

From Left to Right, Skeletons of Gibbon, Orang Outang, Chimpanzee, Gorilla and Man. Note That Tail-Bone Appears in All the Skeletons, Even That of Man. From Huxley's "Man's Place in Nature."

The theory of creative evolution, which was promulgated by the French scientist, Henri Bergson, and of which Shaw's play is merely a literary variation, has some adherents, but is not generally accepted in scientific circles. Science still believes that nature is accomplishing evolution in her own mysterious way, and that if man, who has already evolved from a lower animal type, finally evolves into something immeasurably higher than he now is, it will be through a long natural process covering hundreds of thousands of years, and not by any fantastic intellectual short-cuts.

Above, Man with a Tail, Living in Philippines. At Right, Diagram of Spine Formation of the Man with a Tail. Dotted Line Indicates Normal Spine Formation with Coccyx Turned Under.

JUST at the height of the latest controversy over man's descent from the ape—with William Jennings Bryan, Bernard Shaw and the Kentucky Legislature all attacking Darwin—scientists have come forward with an amazing new piece of evidence in support of evolution—A man with a tail!

A real, living, human being, like other members of the human race in every respect, except that he has a tail like a monkey!

The man has just been discovered in one of the Philippine Islands, off the coast of Asia.

He is of mixed Asiatic origin—his father a Korean and his mother a Filipino.

Opponents of the theory that man has evolved from the higher apes may contend that this savage with a tail is a chance "break of nature," and consequently of no importance as scientific evidence. But the biologists believe otherwise, and biologists have an annoying habit of presenting facts to back up their beliefs.

It is reasonable to regard this peculiarity as a return to an old ancestral condition—as a true reversal to the ancestral type," says J. A. S. Watson, author of recent works on evolution.

Why is it "reasonable?"

"Because," they say, "the bony structure of comparative skeletons of apes and men show that every living human being today still has a tail in rudimentary form. The last vertebra of the spine, called the coccyx, which, like the appendix, serves no useful purpose now, was once the bony base of a true caudal appendage."

They call it "caudal appendage" instead of "tail" because, perhaps, they don't want to injure Mr. Bryan's feelings too sorely—but it means precisely the same thing.

"If you don't believe you have descended from an ape," they say to Mr. Bryan in substance, "just run your hand down your spine and feel your own coccyx."

They say Mr. Bryan is "barking up the wrong tree" anyway when he tries to disprove evolution by refuting Darwin. As a matter of fact, they declare, science has anticipated him by discarding long ago a great part of the detail of Darwin's original teachings, but this process has strengthened rather than weakened the case for evolution.

The general doctrine of evolution, they point out, is based not on the theories of one man, but on the correlated works of nearly all the great geologists, biologists and scientists of the world, beginning with old Aristotle himself, down through Lamarck, Spencer, Haeckel, Kant, Huxley, Agassiz, and including to-day practically every scientific group in existence.

The American Museum of Natural History, the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, the Sorbonne in Paris, all the leading scientific institutions and universities of the world, today accept the basic truth of evolution in precisely the same way they accept the fact that the earth is round.

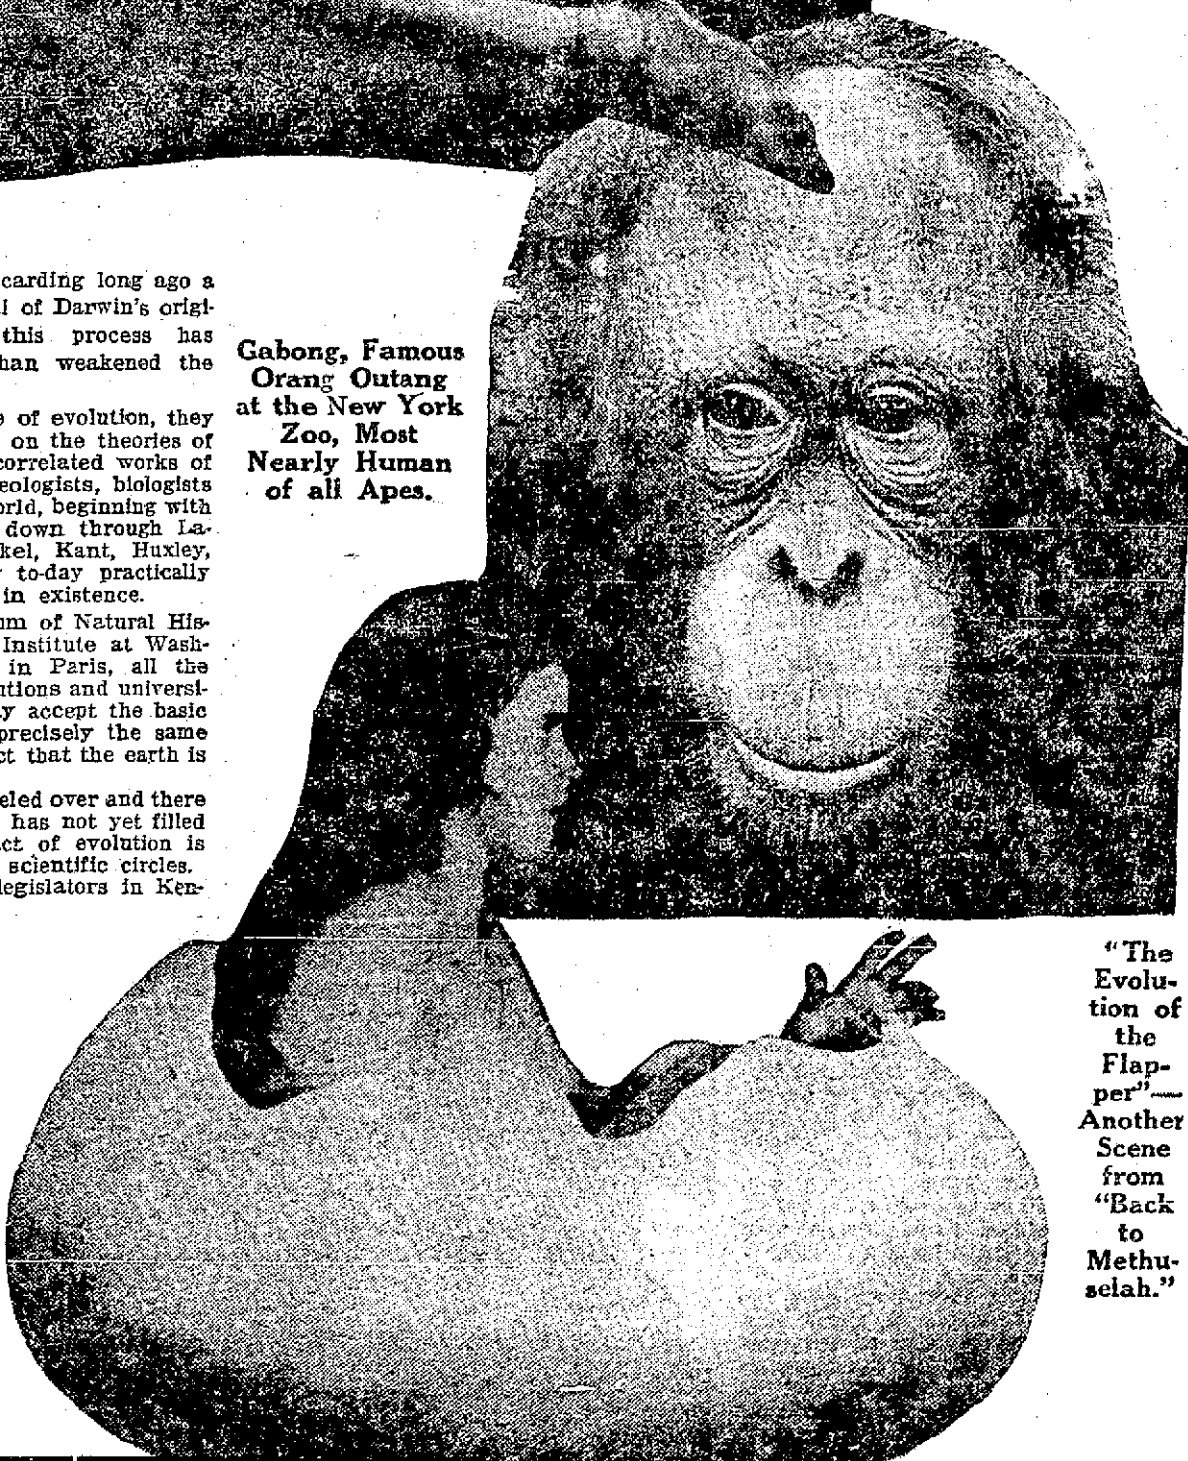

Details are still quarreled over and there are gaps which science has not yet filled in, but the general fact of evolution is universally accepted in scientific circles.

Mr. Bryan and the legislators in Kentucky attacked evolution because, in their opinion it was contrary to the old-fashioned teachings of religion.

However, the modern church is by no means solidly behind them in this view, for an increasing proportion of Christian ministers in all denominations are accepting and teaching evolution.

Bernard Shaw, whose "Back to Methuselah" has figured prominently in current discussions on the subject, does not attack evolution lower and simpler types, both of animals and plants, were in existence before the higher types. For many millions of years there were only invertebrate creatures—worms living in the slime and ooze. It took them 150,000 years to evolve into fish, the first vertebrates or creatures with backbones. Another half-million years elapsed before they evolved into reptiles and crawled on land, and it was not until three-fourths of the entire "geological time" to the present had passed that the earliest mammals occurred.

"The Evolution of the Flapper"—Another Scene from "Back to Methuselah."

Each of these groups, in turn, formed the dominant animal population of the globe, and each in turn was superseded though not entirely, by the next.

Man, the highest type of the mammal group, is now the "dominant animal." Not even science ventures to say what may succeed him in another million years.

In some instances, science has discovered fossil forms in a complete series showing how modern animals have evolved from lower forms. Perhaps the most complete is the horse. There is a whole series of skeletons, beginning with a tiny "cubippus" of earliest mammal times, a little horse with five toes no bigger than a fox—and ending through a number of gradations with the horse of today.

In the case of man, the chain is not so complete, although the resemblance between the lowest form of man and the highest form of ape is so striking that science is convinced man must have evolved from some ape form.

How marvelous this likeness is can be seen from the series of skeletons reproduced on this page from Huxley's "Man's Place in Nature." Looking at the skeletons of the gibbon, the orang-outang, the chimpanzee, the gorilla and the man, no one can help being struck by the fact that here are skeletons of "animals" that belong to the same "family group."

This is borne out not only in the general build and appearance, but by many similarities of the most minute kind in the skeletons and the muscular systems. Huxley said: "Whatever system of organs be studied, the comparison of their modifications in the ape series leads to the same result—that the structural differences which separate man from the gorilla and chimpanzee are not as great as those which separate the gorilla from the lower apes."

Science admits that there is still a gap in actually discovered forms between the highest type of ape and the lowest type of man. This is the famous "Missing Link" to which there have been so many comic as well as scientific allusions during the past half century.

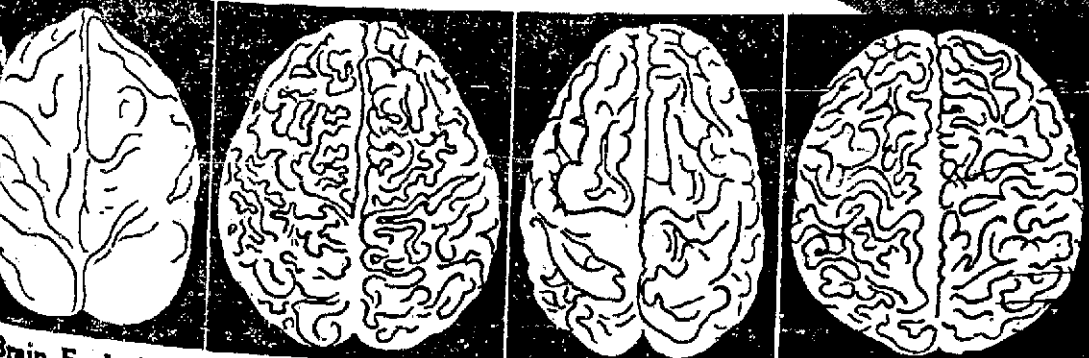

The nearest approach to the "Missing Link" in fossil form is the "Pithecanthropus Erectus," part of whose bones were discovered in Trinil, Java. The top of the skull, some teeth and a thigh-bone were all the remains found. The skull showed a brain-case about half way in size between man and chimpanzee, while the thigh-bone was that of a creature adapted to standing and running upright like a man. The teeth were more human than ape-like.

The nearest approach to the "Missing Link" ever discovered in living form is the savage "man with a tail."

at all—though he does attack Darwin. He is an ardent evolutionist, but champions the new Bergson theory of "creative evolution" as against the more generally accepted belief of evolution by "natural selection."

Shaw's belief is that man can control evolution and his own destiny and can "by willing to be so" evolve himself into something higher—specifically into a race of beings who live to be three hundred years old instead of dying at seventy or eighty.

such as that suggested by the brilliant British playwright. A great deal of what science actually knows about evolution is learned from geology—from "the record of the rocks." The surface of the earth, to a depth of several hundred feet, is made up of rock formations in layers which correspond to certain geological periods. Their chronological succession and relative ages are more or less definitely known. The whole process is supposed to have covered three or four hundred million years. Here and there, through this immense stretch of time, the body of a plant or animal was deposited in the sand or mud or chalk, and has remained in the resulting rocks, in the form of a fossil, through all the ages.

By studying the occurrence of these fossils as they have been discovered from time to time, science has proven that

LONDON.
A GIRL in a crumpled evening gown crawled up the stairs of her flat in Half Moon street at 4 o'clock in the morning, stumbled into a shadowy room and pitched across the bed. When the police smashed in the door hours later, they found a tiny vial between her fingers and while crumbs among the flowers crushed at her waist. The girl was dead.

Scotland Yard called it suicide, but London vice-reformers call it murder. Her death and the deaths of a dozen other girls they lay at the doors of London night clubs. Each new tragedy, they declare, rips the mask a little farther from an amazing underground Babylon existing beneath London's outer crust of darkness, silence and respectability.

Edith Horley, society woman, prone across the blood-wet pages of a novel, "The Lure of Romance"; "Babs" Taylor, stage beauty, shot by her infatuated Cuban sweetheart; Mrs. Audrey Knowles-Harrison with her head thrust in a gas oven while her husband hunted her in Kensington Gardens; Gertrude Yates, only seventeen, brained to death in her bathroom—these are only four on the roll of murders, suicides and wrecked lives written in red across the night life of "the grayest city in the world."

That is what the average tourist regards London—the "grayest" and the "deadest" city in the world after dark. The cocktail curfew and the ban on cabarets appear, to him, to have turned the town into a tomb by 10 o'clock at night. "On to Paris!" he cries, and once in the sparkling Montmartre, thanks his stars he escaped from British dullness. Yet, if he but knew it, he left along Piccadilly a subterranean playground which has no equal for unbridled naughtiness this side of Suez.

The present type of underground London night club, like the so-called "private clubs" in New York, Chicago and other large American cities, sprang into popularity with the semi-prohibition maintained in England during and after the war. A number of the clubs were founded by Americans who learned a trick or two in the dry U. S. A. The Yank came over and taught his British cousin new wrinkles in how to play despite blue laws and blue stockings.

"It's easy," he announced. "Just start a club. Get a nucleus of members, issue cards and—you'd be surprised how the membership grows. Your police will not enter private clubs. Your reformers can't enter them. Your patrons may eat, drink and be merry till morning."

Clubs grew then in the West End like mushrooms. To-day there are more than five hundred and it is estimated that nearly 200,000 Londoners nightly show the cards or speak the passwords that admit them to cellars damp with everything but water.

Clubs are distinctly of two kinds—the older legitimate, well managed establishments for dancing and dining, patronized by "the best people"; second, a horde of newer and lesser places ranging from padlocked jazz palaces to Chinese chop-sueys where "snow" is peddled like so much rice powder.

In the first category come Murray's, Rector's, Cro's and one or two other luxurious cafes which are not included in the recent outcry against the night club. Rector's claims it is not a club, although only registered subscribers and friends personally introduced are admitted. Its weekly Thursday "crazy night," where an atmosphere of Paris prevails, is patronized by such subscribers as the Duke of Sutherland, the Duchess of Hamilton, the Countess of Strathmore, Lady Muriel Paret, Lady Tree, Lady Ribblesdale and a host of other aristocrats.

Murray's likewise among its 20,000 members numbers many of the leading peers of Great Britain. Here about the wildest form of dissipation is "roulette dancing." Against one wall is a huge roulette wheel. Corresponding numbers are painted on different spots on the dance floor. When the winning number is called from the wheel, the couple closest to that number on the floor receives a dainty prize.

Murray's was the scene of a startling prankish episode in which the principals were May Etheridge, once a Gaiety girl, now Duchess of Leinster, and her baby son, Gerald FitzGerald.

May Etheridge was a dancer in "Princess Caprice" when she married Lord Edward FitzGerald in 1913. While he was fighting in Flanders two years later, she returned to the stage in "Watch Your Step." She soon became the leader of a gay set in upper Bohemia, and Lord FitzGerald, after the war, stepped as fast as she did. Society shook its head when, in 1919, the FitzGeralds went into bankruptcy.

By the recent death of Lord FitzGerald's brother, however, they came into the Dukedom and $225,000 a year—a windfall to both of them.

Diners at Murray's one night were amazed when Lady FitzGerald appeared on the gay scene carrying a baby, her young son, Gerald, now Lord Kildare. Lady May noded the child into the arms of a startled waiter and ordered him to "parade boyie with the pastries."

While dancers stopped to crane their necks, the future Lord of Kildare was deposited on a cart in the middle of a tray of tarts and rolled squawling from table to table, while his mother leaned back at her own table, laughing with prankish delight.

It was shortly after this, whisper the London gossips, that "boysie's" very proper aunt summoned his mother to Johnstown Castle in historic County Wexford, where she—and her young son—are getting along nicely since then without the Bohemian life.

If all the escapades at London night clubs were as merely frivolous as this, the London police today would not be proceeding against such places as the Blue Hall, Brett's, the "43 Dances" and the Palais Royal, each of which was recently raided.

It is not babies giggling among cherry tarts, however, but episodes far grimmer and more sinister that have aroused Scotland Yard to action.

The death of "Billie" Carleton, the beautiful American girl whose last dance was at the famous Victory Ball, first turned the light on London night clubs. To-day "Billie" Carleton's name heads a tragic list—girl after girl who has been sucked into the swirl of "London after dark."

Some have disappeared forever into that gray caldron. The records at Scotland Yard bear the names of hundreds of girls who came up to London gay and blithe, were last seen with jolly companions at some night club—and now have dropped out of sight altogether.

Others were broken in the whirlpool. They have been cast out, faded and battered derelicts, half crazed by the opium, heroin and morphine they crave like men thirsting for water in the desert. London asylums are filled with such cases.

Still others, like "Billie" Carleton, won release from life by an overdose of poison or became the victim of some frenzied man who "killed the thing he loved" after a sordid night club revel.

Again, the night clubs have been the reef on which hundreds of happy marriages were wrecked. One of the most devoted couples in London was Margaret Bannerman, the Canadian actress, and Pat Somerset, her handsome "matinee idol" husband, until he met Edith Day, inventor of the tickle toe. The American dancer and Somerset were seen together frequent-

He seemed startled and unimpressed by the artless confession, and held her close.

"But, my dear girl! you're trembling. What is it? Tell me."

"It's so wonderful to have you back, Lynn. Don't ever leave me again."

"You tempt me to," he laughed indulgently. "I think you've learned to love me better while I've been away than you did in all the while that I was here."

She answered with an odd little laugh of love and deprecation: "I really think I have."

They dined at Marcello's, not the happiest selection for their first few hours together, for the place was crowded with picture-folk.

Following to Santa Monica, Lucinda snuggled into the hollow of Summerland's arm, and rested a long time in contented silence.

"It is too perfect," she murmured at length, "too sweet to last."

"Why not?" So long as we love, what's to prevent all beauty lasting?

"Life, I mean." — It took all her courage to speak of what she had then purposely kept back. — "Bellamy."

The car was swinging into the streets of Santa Monica. Lucinda gave him her lips.

"Let's forget it for tonight. Kiss me again while there's time."

The restaurant to which the Lontines had hidden them was the one in those times most favored by its weekly night of carnival.

Round the four walls and enclosing the crowded floor for dancing, tables were so closely ranked that passage between them was largely impracticable without a guide. Everybody of any consequence in the studios was there, and everybody knew everybody else and called him by his first name — preferably at the top of his lungs.

Lucinda's party, a large one, comprising the most influential members of the colony with whom he and Summerland were on agreeable terms, had been long enough in session already to have become indifferently exhilarated and collectively hilarious. Summerland took to its bosom with shouts of acclaim, and he seemed to find it easy to catch the spirit of the gathering.

A sense of frustration oppressed Lucinda. She had been happy half an hour since. Here in this heady atmosphere of perfumed flesh, tobacco and pungent alcohol, the idyl of her evening grew faint and fled. While the man she loved had no regrets.

In a moment of disconcerting suddenness she saw him as a strange man, flushed with drink and blown with license, looking on other women with a satyr's appraising eyes, bandying ribald waxes with the lips she had so lately kissed. And she winced and drew away, recalling the abandon of affection with which she had given herself to his embrace at the hotel, feeling of a sudden soiled and shopworn as from common handling.

A strange man, a man she had known but a few brief weeks!

Finery Could Hardly Disguise The Wild and Ragged Loveliness of Nelly Marquis.

Covertly watching him, she saw Summerland in the middle of a passage of peritilge start and fall silent, his lips in an instant wiped bare of speech. And following the line of his stare, she espied, at some distance at a table near the edge of the dance-floor, Bellamy sitting with a woman.

He saw her but made no sign more than to intensify his meaning smile, and immediately returned courteous attention to his companion.

At this Lucinda stared in doubt for several seconds, she was so changed. But finery that shrieked of money spent without stint or taste could hardly disguise the wild and ragged loveliness of Nelly Marquis.

XXVI

Lucinda looked a second time. More than a month had passed since that brief acquaintance, and Lucinda had put her out of mind so completely that her efforts to recall the features of the other conjured up only a foggy impression of a shabby, haggard, haunted shadow, by turns wilful and feebly defiant, that bore what might be no more than chance likeness to this figure of flaming extravagance at Bellamy's table.

A question forming on her lips, Lucinda turned back to Summerland, but surprised the tail of his eye veering hastily away, and fancied a shade of over-elaboration in the easy, laconic air he was quick to assume.

She stole another glance across the room. By every indication Bellamy found his company most entertaining; he was paying her salutes, a tribute of smiling attention which she as evidently found both grateful and inspiring. While Lucinda was looking she drained her highball glass and with an air peremptory and arch planted it in front of Bellamy to be replenished; a service which he rendered with the aid of a pocket flask — adding to his own glass, however, water only.

Summerland was eyeing her with a quizzical air. Lucinda managed half a smile.

"Shall we dance?"

She surveyed the crowded floor dubiously. "It's an awful crush, I'm afraid." Nevertheless she got up and threaded the jostling tables with Lynn at her heels.

It was an awful crush. Few better dancers than Lynn Summerland ever trod a ball-room floor, but even he was put to it to steer a safe course. In that welter, Lucinda heard a his of breath withdrawn and looked up to see Lynn's face disfigured by a spasm of pain. In the same instant he stopped short in the next he groaned between set teeth.

"Have to get out of this, I'm afraid," he gasped. "My foot — somebody with a hoof like a sledgehammer landed on it just now. That wouldn't matter, only the confounded thing got caught between a couple of logs while we were doing that river stuff."

He had an affecting limp on the way back to their table where he announced he would have to get home and out of his shoes before he could hope to know another instant's ease.

"Cross, sweetheart?" he inquired gently as they drove off. "I'm sorry you let me drag you away."

"It isn't that," Lucinda replied, almost brusquely. "I wasn't enjoying myself, anyway — wanted to leave almost as soon as we arrived."

"Then what is it?"

She asked evasively: "How's your foot?"

"Much better, thanks. Guess I must've dislocated one of the smaller bones in that logging stunt."

"I thought possibly you were pretending on my account."

"You mean, because your husband was there?"

"It was Miss Marquis wasn't it?"

"Yes, Linda — afraid it was."

"Your amiable husband's in for an interesting life, if that young woman has got her claws into him."

"Lynn, where do you suppose the girl has been all this time, since that night she left the hotel? It seems funny she should disappear so completely for — how long it is four weeks? — five? — and then turn up in Bell's company."

"Well," Lynn submitted: "dare I say you were to ask him — 'Or if you were to ask her!'"

But immediately Lucinda repeated her resentment of what she had hastily taken to be an attempt to belaud impatience with ill-timed levity.

The man shifted in his corner, till he sat half-facing her, his manner seriously defensive.

"Look here, Linda! I've known a long time you suspected there was something between this Marquis girl and me — or had been."

Lynn tumbled for and found her hand beneath the rug that covered their knees. "You see."

"Oh, I see!" Lucinda snapped and drew her hand away.

"But I do, Lynn; and I'm quite reasonable about it. Only, I presume, I needed this to make me understand the kind of man I'd given my heart to."

"That's unfair. You know perfectly, nine times out of ten the man isn't to blame. Besides —"

"It isn't a question with me of blame or excuse, it's just a feeling that's suddenly come over me, that I've committed my life to the care of a man whom I must always share with his memories of other sweethearts."

"Well, but what about my feelings? Do you suppose it makes me happy to be all the time reminded that Bellamy drove —"

"Please, dear, don't. Forgive me — I couldn't help it. Besides, there's this to be said: If I did love another man before I met you, he was only one; while you have known so many loves like — like this Marquis girl — not, you know, not quite."

"You're all wrong, about Nelly Marquis. She's one that didn't happen, if you're not to know the truth."

"Oh!" Lucinda commented without emotion — "didn't she?"

"Along with a hundred others I get the credit for —"

"I dare say, by Hollywood standards, credit is the right word."

"Oh, hang it all, Linda! You must understand. A man in my line — Oh, you know how it is —"

There'll always be women ready to make fools of themselves over any man who manages to get a certain degree of prominence. I met Nelly Marquis shortly after I'd made my first real dent in pictures. She was so hard hit I used to be afraid to leave the house until I'd sent out scouts to make sure the coast was clear. I've always thought that trouble of hers was more than half responsible for her mania about me."

"What trouble?"

"Dope. She's a hop nut. Coke — cocaine's her big bet. That must've been the trouble, that time you found her stretched: an overdose. I didn't like to tell you because — well, frankly, I didn't want you to think so much about the girl."

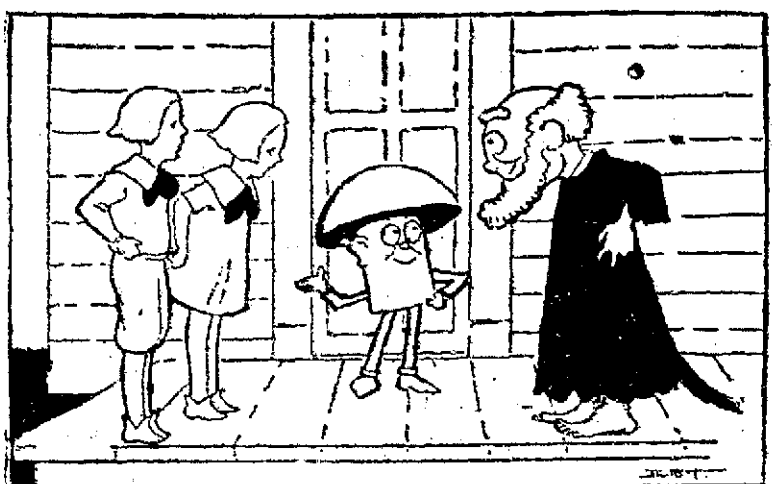

"Hang it! What I'm trying to say is this: Nelly took to the dope after I'd met her, but only, I believe, because she got in with the wrong crowd. And there's an awful lot of that sort of thing goes on more or less quietly out here. They lead one another on. When they've tried everything else they take a chance on the hop to see if there's really anything in it, and then they're gone. They drift into little cliques and have parties, ether parties, and that sort of thing. You know, where they chose one by lot to stay off the stuff and watch the others to make sure nobody strangles to death while they're around him in a circle."

Lucinda lifted her hands to her ears. "Please, Lynn, please! I don't want to hear any more. It's too dreadful!"

THE MAN-IN-THE-MOON IS OLD AND RAGGED

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"How are you, Nancy! Pleased to meet you, Nick!" said Mr. Peera-bout pleasantly.

The door of the tumble-down hut under the silver trees opened, and a funny, queer, ragged, little old man appeared, to the Twins' astonished eyes.

"What a queer servant the Man-in-the-Moon keeps," thought they. It was bad enough to find that his highness lived in such a miserable place when the rest of the moon was so magnificent, but this was still worse; they had visited a good many royal people on their adventures and never yet had they been admitted by a footman so poorly clad.

"Ha, ha, ha! Ho, ho, ho!" chuckled the queer, ragged person who looked for all the world like a jolly, fat friar. "Here's company, and you're as welcome as poverty."

SHORT SHAVINGS

Nike Summers, contractor, reports a neighbor's daughter brought home some raffia in its natural shade to weave some mats. The new cook made a wrong guess as to its nature, and cooked up a mess of it.

Hugo, Klotz, Ford salesman, reports the latest arrival at his boarding house is a quiet fellow. He gave up playing the zither and spends his evenings playing solitaire. He gave up the zither, he says, because he feared it might "disturb the neighbors."

Ortha O. Barr of the Barr Hotel, says a woman guest telephoned a friend in Minneapolis. Her friend wasn't home. A daughter answered the call and couldn't resist describing a gown she meant to wear at a dance. This news, by long distance wire, cost $4.

Veryl Myers, says no one could discover why the water wouldn't drain out of the sink in the store where she is employed. Some guessed that the sink worked like a bath tub. A plumber was called. He solved the mystery by pulling the plug.

WEDDING POSTPONED FOR THE FIFTH TIME

PARIS—"Off again, on again." "The wedding date's gone again." Mary Landon Baker, for the fifth time Saturday postponed the date for her wedding to Allister McCormick.

The much discussed romance of McCormick and the Chicago heiress, which excited the interest of society in England, France and the United States, received another setback when Allister McCormick informed the United Press Saturday that the ceremony had been put off until September.

The world's most patient bridegroom made the announcement sadly, but insisted that "everything was all right," and that the postponement was "for the best."

LIMA MAN RETURNS AFTER AN ABSENCE OF 21 YEARS

After an absence of 21 years, Paul Johnson, son of David Johnson, 459 W. Haller-st., has returned for a visit.

Johnson drifted away from home years ago and gradually discontinued writing. He worked here and there, mostly in the west. Recently he decided to return for a visit. He had lost track of his family in the interval. At Ada, he made inquiries and located relatives. They in turn notified his father.

As a result, a family reunion is being held at the Johnson home in Haller-st. Among relatives visiting here are Bert Johnson, Chicago, a brother; Mrs. Uldine Gant, Akron, a sister.

MAIDEN NAME RESTORED IN DECREE OF DIVORCE

Right to resume her former name Mary L. Pratt, was granted Mrs. Mary Avery, 818 N. Union-st., who obtained a divorce from William S. Avery, concrete mixer, in common pleas court Saturday.

The decree was granted by Judge Fred C. Becker, after the plaintiff had related various instances of cruelty and neglect at hands of the defendant. The costs of the action were assessed to the wife. The action was not contested.

Next time try Lybarger's new garage—Corner Woodlawn and Allen—Main Road, High 306.

HOW ADDED TUNING CIRCUITS REDUCE STATIC

(By PAUL F. GODLEY)

America's Foremost Radio Authority

Radio fans have been puzzled during the past few weeks by noises in their receivers which they have variously described as "scrapping," "scratching" and "clicking."

Many of them have jumped to the conclusion that something has gone wrong with their receivers. But the sets aren't to blame at all. The fault is entirely nature's brand of radio—static.

This is the main source of disturbance in wireless communication. Engineers for many years have diligently applied themselves in an effort to discover some way of eliminating the effects of static.

No method has yet been discovered which will entirely eliminate static, although many methods have been put forth for minimizing its effects. When several of the best devices are used simultaneously in connection with any one receiver, it is possible to get as high as 90 per cent improvement in that set.

The measures necessary to secure this improvement, however, are of a nature entirely unsuited to application on the home radiophone set because they are bulky and expensive.

SINGLE CIRCUIT SET

The first means discovered for the reduction of static interference was the "tuning" of the receiver circuits. The next step was one where this tuning was carried still further—a

RADIO MUSIC REPLACES DANCE ORCHESTRA

Dancing to music from the air has been taken up in New York. It's spreading to other places. Instead of its regular orchestra, the Pennsylvania Hotel installed a large machine shaped like a phonograph and tuned it on the Newark radio broadcasting station. Dance music came over by radio. Other hotels are copying this stunt.

tion on the home radiophone set because they are bulky and expensive.

SINGLE CIRCUIT SET

The first means discovered for the reduction of static interference was the "tuning" of the receiver circuits. The next step was one where this tuning was carried still further—a second tuning circuit was added to the receiver and "coupled" weakly to the tuned antenna circuit.

A great many radio receivers in use today are of the "single circuit" type. But considerably greater freedom from static disturbances is to be had by the use of a "two-circuit" receiver.

TWO-CIRCUIT SET

The two-circuit receivers of the crystal type are usually composed of an "inductive coupler" (loose coupler) together with variable tuning condensers used in both antenna and the second circuit (closed circuit). Unfortunately, the receivers which have been exploited most during the last few months have been single-circuit receivers. As the radio public becomes educated it will demand receivers of the higher grade. They do not cost a great deal more.
